Strosniders Find Horses Good Hobby

By - Ron Paris

After a hard day of selling cars, there's nothing like a good horse.

Archie Strosnider, manager of Goodwill Motors, spends his working hours selling cars but most of his time off is spent at his home in lower Transylvania working with his horse, Dixie.

Mr. and Mrs. Strosnider bought Dixie, an American Saddle-bred 5 gaited horse, from Rock Branch Farm, Anderson, S. C., last November. Before the Strosniders bought her, Dixie had been a show horse. She had collected many ribbons and trophies in shows all over South Carolina, including one trophy that was

In addition, it is announced that the station has made arrangements to offer special daily reports from Atlantic City in order to give even better coverage of this important event.

Important people in the news including President Lyndon Johnson, Republican Presidential Nominee Barry Goldwater, and many others will be heard daily on WPNF's updated news coverage, according to station manager Al Martin.

"We are pleased at the opportunity of better serving our community with expanded news reports," Martin stated.

S. Forestry Service, Ted Seely; and Wednesday, Home Economics Extension Agent, Jean Childers.

Residents of the community are asked to bring their entries to the center before 10:00 a.m. Saturday, when the fair will be open to the public.

presented in Aiken by Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Dixie has not been shown since coming to the Strosniders. They bought her mainly for pleasure, rather than show.

Taking care of a horse is a daily affair. Since Mr. Strosnider works, the job falls mainly to Mrs. Strosnider. Dixie must be brushed, combed and have her hooves dressed every day. She has special pads between the hooves and her shoes to prevent injury to them. She even gets her daily dose of vitamins to keep her healthy.

Mr. Strosnider was born in the west and did much riding there, but it was mainly on quarter horses in a western roping saddle. Dixie takes a special English saddle, which is cut away at the shoulder to prevent rubbing. The saddle costs $250. A special tail, made of real horse hair, which is used for show costs another $75.

Mrs. Strosnider works Dixie daily, often taking her out and riding over the whole valley or up to Cascade Lake.

"A horse must be worked daily in order to keep up its stamina," said Mr. Strosnider. "Otherwise it will get soft".

The Strosniders have plans to clear away a large portion of their cornfield and build a riding ring. When this is done they hope to form a riding club.

Mr. Strosnider acted as vice-president of a riding club when
