

Program "Target 2" Of Extension Service Is Reviewed By Board Members

Jim Davis Says Purpose Is To Increase Income

"Target 2", a new 5-year Extension plan for Transylvania county, has been completed, and copies were presented by the local Extension staff to members of the Extension Advisory Board.

The meeting was held in the Ecusta cafeteria of Olin Mathieson Chemical corporation at Pisgah Forest.

According to Jim Davis, Transylvania Extension chairman, the new 5-year plan was developed by his office with the aid of Board members and various committees.

The program is given the name "Target 2" because it is the second program the entire state has participated in and the estimated farm income is two billion dollars by 1971.

The local program is part of an over-all state wide program of the Agricultural Extension Service at North Carolina State University, which was launched in Raleigh, January 30th, by Governor Dan Moore and University officials.

Transylvania county has goals in four areas under the "Target 2" opportunities endeavor, states Extension personnel.

These long range objectives include goals in Agriculture Production and Marketing, Family Living, 4-H and Youth, and Community Resource Development.

"Target 2" is a long-range educational program of the Extension Service and the main objective is to help the people of Transylvania, as well as North Carolina, increase income and improve family living.

Transylvania county's proportion of the two billion dollars farm income is estimated at $3,954,522.

Those involved for making the program in Transylvania county are as follows:

Extension Advisory Board, officers — Chairman, M. H. Shuford; vice chairman, Frank Byrd; Secretary, Mrs. E. H. Mackey, Sr. Two special elected members, Mrs. Robert Miller, Ralph Lee.

Other members of the Advisory Board are—Allen Brittain, N. B. Woody, Glenn Whitmire, Charlie Russell, Mrs. Eric C. Hansen, Wayne Bradburn, Donald Lee Moore, Norris Powell, Mrs. Norris Powell, Mrs. Coy Fisher and Mrs. Leroy Reid.

The committees are: Agricultural Production and Marketing — Glenn Whitmire, chairman, Herbert Fisher, L. E. Owen, Carl Bryson, Arnold Wells, Quentin Cantrell, M. H. Shuford, Robert Chappell.

Family Living — Mrs. Coy Fisher, chairman, Mrs. J. A. Whitmire, Mrs. L. C. Case, Jr., Mrs. Chester Brown, Mrs. E. H. Mackey, Sr., Mrs. Leroy Rackley, Mrs. Earl Parker, Mrs. Coolidge Powell.

4-H and Youth — Norris Powell, chairman, Mrs. W. R. Humphrey, Mrs. Leroy Reid, Mrs. Clyde Summey, Mrs. Joe Flemmons, Kadez Wilde, Mrs. Frazier Sentelle, Mrs. Ronald Daniels.

Community Resource Development — Frank Byrd, chairman, Walter Cantrell, Roy Lambert, Elmo Crowe, Mrs. Ralph Lee, Mrs. Walter McNeely, Mrs. Ed Sentell, C. L. Fox.

County Extension Personnel include the County Extension Chairman, Jerry L. Brown, assistant agricultural extension agent, and Miss Jean Childers, Home Economics Extension agent.

Faithful in Little and Much

OUR EARTHLY LIFE INFLUENCES OUR LIFE TO COME

Scripture—Luke 16:1-17; 17:1-19.

By R. H. RAMSEY

EVIDENCE of our Lord's interest in the everyday happenings of men's lives and the importance He attached to what men do with their material possessions is shown by the fact that more of His parables are based upon the uses of property and money than any other aspect of man's daily life.

Today's lesson begins with the parable of an unfaithful steward. The steward apparently possessed some flair for business, else he would not have held such a responsible position. Thus his extravagances were not the result of ignorance or incapability; rather they resulted from carelessness and unfaithfulness to his master's trust.

Nowhere does it say the steward stole anything. Perhaps he spent more than he should, was careless about gathering in the crops or paid more than necessary for the estate's maintenance and improvement, for by the end of the year he could show no profit. Informed of the steward's wastefulness, the master told him to balance his books, straighten out his affairs and leave.

withdrawn at any moment. Heavenly riches, on the other hand, are immense, real and eternally secure.

Jesus said no man can serve two masters, God and money. When the Pharisees scoffed at this, Jesus rebuked them. In general, they were outwardly righteous; inwardly were greedy and covetous, doing almost anything to acquire wealth and esteem. This, He said, was an abomination in the sight of God. And those who live solely and selfishly for wealth will come to a tragic end in the life hereafter, as illustrated by the parable of the rich man and Lazarus.

In the opening of the 17th chapter Jesus lays down four basic truths which true believers must never forget. He warns of the greater woe which awaits those believers who, by their words or deeds, cause others to fall into sin. He charges all believers with the obligation to forgive over and over those who sin against us and repent of it. He reminds us to have faith, vital, living, holy faith, however small, even as a grain of mustard seed, and it

GOLDEN TEXT

"For I say, through the grace given unto me, to every man that is among you, not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think; but to think soberly, according as God hath dealt to every man the measure of faith." — Romans 12:3.

In so doing, the steward called in all of his master's debtors and made the best possible settlements with each of them. Though his master commends him for doing wisely, he does not attribute moral integrity or uprightness of character to him. The day of reckoning had come for the steward. He had a secure, responsible job, and because he wasted his master's goods, he lost it. The truths Jesus tried to illustrate in this parable have had various interpretations. However, most scholars agree that the unrighteousness of which He spoke is not wickedness, for money is not immoral. Money is entirely non-moral. There is no evil in it, there is no good in it. Only the use of it is good or bad. "Money," as Jesus used it, means earthly riches as contrasted with the true riches of heaven. And when men are unfaithful when entrusted with earthly riches, how can they be trusted with those heavenly riches of far greater value? Earthly wealth is trivial, unreal. It doesn't even belong to us. It is a loan or trust which may be will produce results. And, if we are to be true servants of God, we are to live lives of service to Him through our fellowmen. We are to repay evil with good, giving gladly more than we receive or hope to receive, without thoughts of incurring another's thanks or gratitude. Thus, the first ten verses of the chapter offer the sum and substance of a Christian's duty. The story of Christ's miraculous healing of the ten lepers offers graphic illustration of our Lord's conception of doing one's duty without expecting thanks. On His way to Jerusalem Jesus encountered ten lepers who begged Him to heal them. He did and, according to Levitical law, sent them to the priests to be officially pronounced clean. They set off, as directed, but one—a Samaritan—turned back in the fullness of a grateful heart to give glory to God and thanks to his Healer. Jesus remarked on the fact that only one out of the ten turned back to thank Him and rewarded him by pronouncing him spiritually whole and renewed, in addition to his physical restoration.
