Campus Action Helps Break Monotony

Ever so often something happens on the campus here at Brevard to really break the monotony of everyday happenings. This something happened last Monday night and early Tuesday morning.

The traditional big university party was held by a good many B. C. boys. First the boys surrounded Jones Hall and were met with too few rewards, so they made their way to Beam where they were met with even fewer. Later the "collectors" congregated around the flag pole before breaking up into smaller groups.

About fifteen minutes later shouts came from back campus around the gym. This time the group wanted something a little more expensive as they yelled, "We want the T.V. to the curiosity of all but a few girls."

The Jones co-eds were not to be outdone, however, as they organized their own party to retaliate at 8:00 the next morning. These girls surrounded Green and Taylor Halls and demanded a "boxer rebellion," amidst the shouts of good morning. After arousing everyone in Green and Taylor, the Jones Raiders were themselves raided by the Green boys, and ran back to front campus. Then they proceeded to East Beam but were met with no enthusiasm.

Social Security Changes

By JAMES E. ROBERTSON District Manager

There's an important new provision for women workers and their children—a change in the Social Security rule for dependency of children on their mothers.

Under this change, many children whose claims previously had to be denied may now qualify for monthly benefits on their mothers' work records.

Heretofore a child generally was not "dependent" on the mother under social security law unless, in addition to being "fully insured," the mother had worked under Social Security at least one-half of the last 3 years before she died, retired, or became disabled. (There was a provision that a child might qualify for benefits on the mother's record if at the time of her death, retirement, or disability she was actually supporting the child. However, in most cases this wasn't possible for obvious reasons including the father's earnings and support of the child.)

Under the changed law, the general rule is that the mother's recent work and support are not required. A child will generally be deemed dependent on his mother, as on his father, unless he is legally adopted by another person. And a child can get benefits on his mother's record under the same conditions and just as easily as he can become entitled on his father's account.

It is estimated that 175,000 children will become eligible at once under this new provision.

Under another new provision, a husband who was dependent on his wife at the time of her death — may now qualify for monthly benefits without the wife's having worked half of the last 3 years before she retired, became disabled, or died. This change in the law will make an estimated 5,000 dependent husbands and widowers eligible at once for benefits.

There are also important changes regarding adopted children. Now a child adopted by the surviving spouse (widow or widower) of a worker may qualify for benefits on the deceased worker's record if the adoption proceedings had begun before the worker died, even though the adoption is not completed within 2 years after the worker's death. (Formerly the adoption had to be completed in the 2-year period.)

Also, the law provides that a child legally adopted by a worker after he became ened out the seriousness of smoking and narcotics and urged the students to take a long look at the problem. Actual cases and current statistics were related to the students. Mr. Lee cautioned students about being approached by LSD salesmen currently infesting college campuses.

A film, "Time Pulls the Trigger," was shown by the two men. The film depicted the problem of lung cancer and cigarette smoking as the cause.

The program presented by the NEP has appeared at many colleges and clubs, especially the PTA and the 4-H club.

Mr. Lee, in his closing remarks, offered help to any student. He mentioned the popular "5 Day Plan to Stop Smoking," endorsed by the American Medical Association.

itled to disability benefits may qualify for child's benefits if all these conditions are met: (1) the adoption was supervised by a child placement agency, (2) it was decreed by a court of competent jurisdiction in the U. S., (3) the adopting parent had resided continuously in the U. S. for at least 1 year before the date of the adoption, and (4) the child was under 18 at the time of the adoption.

And, finally, there's a change in the law whereby a widow or dependent widower who was married less than a year before the husband or wife died may now qualify for monthly benefits, provided other requirements are met — and if (1) the marital relationship had existed at least 9 months just before the spouse's death or if (2) the marriage had lasted at least 3 months and the spouse died while on active duty and in line of duty in one of the uniformed services, or the death was "accidental" (unless at the time of marriage the worker could not reasonably have been expected to live for 9 months).

Incidentally, the same duration - of - marriage rule applies for a stepchild to get benefits on a deceased stepparent's record.
