Survey Reveals

More Working Women Now In County

An increasing number of women in Transylvania County have been entering the labor force in recent years.

The latest figures indicate that no less than 29.1 percent of the local female population over the age of 14 are now employed outside the home or are looking for such employment.

By way of comparison, as recently as 1960 the percentage was 26.2. The census taken at that time showed a total of 1,605 local women in the labor force.

Much of the increase is attributed to married women, particularly those over 40, returning to the labor force. Now that their children are growing up, they find that they are able to discharge their household duties and still have enough time left over to take outside jobs either part-time or full time.

The changes that have been taking place in the female employment picture are brought out in national studies made by the Department of Labor, the National Industrial Conference Board and others.

In Transylvania county, on the basis of their overall findings, the proportion of working women is greater than it has ever been.

The 29.1 percent that are estimated to be in the labor force in the local area is somewhat lower, however, than the 37.4 percent average in the United States as a whole.

The surveys show that age is no longer a barrier to employment for women. More than half of those between 45 and 54 are now in the labor force and,

"No Burning" Orders Are Issued Here

Burning permits have been cancelled in 30 western North Carolina counties, including Transylvania, according to Fire Chief Dan Merrill.

The order was handed down by State Forester Ralph C. Winkworth because of what he called "a potentially dangerous fire situation."

The area is extremely dry because of a lack of rain since early February. No rain is expected in the area until late this week, if then.

The no-burning order became effective Monday at noon and will stay in effect until further notice.

The Brevard fire department was called out to answer an alarm at the residence of Harmon Holden on King road at 1:33 p. m., Saturday. The house was engulfed in flames when the firemen arrived.

Monday afternoon at 5:46 they had to put out a brush fire off the Asheville highway near Longhorn restaurant.

At 1:50 Tuesday morning, an alarm was turned in reporting a fire in a trailer on Elm Bend road. It was a false alarm, and the Brevard police department is investigating the call.
