Offensive interior linemen seldom get any words of praise in football write-ups, which in my estimation is a great injustice. You always read about the brilliant runs, the great catches, the pinpoint passing, and occasionally, you'll read about someone's great "Fearsom Foursome" or "Purple People Eaters" who do such fine jobs as defensive linemen. But you actually read something about offensive interior linemen as often as an atheist reads the Bible.

This is all to say that Gary Nelson did a great job as an offensive interior lineman in the Shrine Bowl last Saturday afternoon at Charlotte. Now, you have to watch closely to see just what an offensive tackle, guard or center does to help pave the way for those brilliant runs, great catches, and yes, to enable the quarterback to have time for his pin-point passing. His main duty is to see that his assigned "man" or opponent, doesn't get through to spill the ball carrier or passer for a big loss, and to block, block, block, while his team tries to pick up valuable yardage.

No one could have done a better job at his assigned task than Gary Nelson did (and has done throughout his high school football career), and it certainly wasn't his fault that the South Carolina forces prevailed in the big Shrine Bowl classic by a 35-23 margin.

Gary started and played all the way on offense for the Tar Heels, and then from midway of the third period on, he played on defense as well. He followed a long tradition of Brevard High graders who have gone to the big all-star classic and each has done his job well. Not one Shrine Bowl selectee from Brevard has ever gone down there and spent much time on the bench, and Gary was no exception to this "rule". If you're from Brevard and go to the Shrine Bowl, you play.

Gary and Pisgah's Steve Limbo played side by side on offense throughout the entire game, and each did his job well. We just wanted to let the home folks know that our ole mountain boys did a good job, and this was proved when Silva-Webster's Gary Cowan earned the trophy as the game's most outstanding defensive player. Gary Nelson is one more fine football player, and we want to congratulate him for his outstanding efforts in a losing cause last Saturday. Now, if they had just had someone down there with him who could carry the ball

At Etowah Valley

Local Support Pledged To 1971 Asheville-Kemper Golf Classic

Brevard and other communities in Western North Carolina have pledged their support of the Asheville-Kemper Golf classic, to be played next June at Etowah Valley.

General Chairman Gene Ochsenreiter, of Asheville, met here last Thursday at noon with a number of golfers and other civic leaders and mapped plans for the big event, which will draw thousands to this area.

Jerry Willis is the local chairman, and he is assisted by Dr. W. A. Davis.

Others attending the meeting with Mr. Ochsenreiter included Ray Simmons, Fritz Merrell, Gil Coan, Dr. Walter Clayton, Charles Eggleston, Gene Baker, Clifton Sneedon and John Anderson.

"The Asheville-Kemper affords us with an excellent opportunity to establish Western North Carolina as the Summer Golf Capital of the country," Mr. Ochsenreiter told golfing enthusiasts in a mid-morning meeting at the Skyland Hotel in Hendersonville and at a luncheon at Berry's in Brevard.

"We have some of the finest golf courses in the country and this gives us an opportunity to advertise the fact that we have an abundance of challenging courses in the most picturesque setting to be found anywhere. This isn't just an Asheville or Etowah Valley promotion. It's a sectional attraction and we need and seek the cooperation of all the cities, towns and golf courses in Western North Carolina," the chairman asserted.

Mr. Ochsenreiter circulated a list of what committees would be necessitated and also a breakdown of estimated expenses showing that the complete package will necessitate an outlay of several thousand dollars.

He reviewed plans for the tournament noting that the June 8 pro-am field tourney be open to all types of amateurs from all over WNC to play. He told of preliminary plans for the formation of pro-am teams to play for a $5,000 purse and added that a special $1,000 purse is offered for a hole-in-one.

He also told how pro golfers will be qualified for the Asheville-Kemper and revealed that a few established golfers as well as the pro leaders of the future will be in the field.

One of the area's finest amateur golfers, Ochsenreiter said that in the next few weeks men and women from the various cities of Western North Carolina will be selected to work on committees designed to make this the very highest caliber and most successful tournament possible. He explained that the aim will be to make the tournament a permanent fixture for WNC, possibly leading to a larger affair in the future.

Mr. Ochsenreiter added that the pro-am entry fee for amateur will cover a party and tournament tickets, as well as some other benefits. At the same time he urged the groups to seek to get early pro-am entries in order that a working treasury can be set up.

Glen Cannon Country Club Is Completing Successful Year

A successful meeting of the stockholders of the Glen Cannon Country club was held Monday night at the club house with approximately 80 persons attending.

President Gil Coan reported that the club had operated in the black during 1970, and he told of plans for the New Year.

Many improvements were made during the past year, and the championship course is reported in ideal condition, especially for this time of the year.

President Coan thanked the members of their assistance in cleaning up the damages caused by the flood during early October.

He recalled the installation of new tees on several holes, which was a tremendous improvement to the course.

He told of the installation of 150 marked on each hole. This work was done and donated by Robert L. Daniels and his family.

Mr. Coan said that the Social committee had made plans for 1971, and the committee would operate on a budget. Monthly entertainment is being planned.

Dues for the coming year will remain the same as they were in 1970.

The annual meeting of Glen Cannon is set for January 19th, 1971.
