With Forestry Officials

Efforts Are Made To Settle Balsam Grove Land Dispute

A desperate effort was made here at a meeting last Saturday to settle the land dispute between Vernon McCall and the U. S. Forest Service at Balsam Grove.

U. S. Forest officials agreed to permit Mr. McCall to move back on the land, temporarily, from which he was disposed over two weeks ago.

The meeting was attended by forest service officials, their attorney, the U. S. District Attorney, and his assistant, a state representative, and members of the Balsam Grove community, where McCall lives, a resident community VISTA worker, and the community's attorney.

However, the controversy between the forest service and McCall's father, Cannon McCall, who will be 90 years old in April, will probably have to be settled in court. Both the elder McCall and the forest service claim the one and one-half acre tract of land in the Pisgah National Forest area.

And the disposition of the conflict between the community and Dan W. Hile, district ranger who supervised the burying of Vernon's trailer two weeks ago, was still to be settled.

The dispute involving Vernon McCall centers around the burial of his trailer, an adjoining shed, what he claims were most of his personal belongings, a pipe and a fence that was on the land in question, by forest service personnel. The forest service says, however, that everything movable was taken from the trailer before it was buried.

Ranger Hile was charged with malicious damage to property in connection with the incident and is free on $500 bond. His trial, originally scheduled for a hearing last Thursday in Transylvania District Court, was moved through a federal court order to U. S. District Court in Asheville. A trial date has been set for the May term.

The meeting Saturday was held in the office of State Representative Charles Taylor, who acted as mediator for both sides. U. S. District Attorney Keith Snyder of Asheville, present as Hile's attorney, said the meeting was a good example of "government in action."

Ted Schlapfer, of Atlanta, regional forester, said that Vernon McCall may move a trailer he is now renting onto the land and live there until the question of who owns the land can be settled legally.

Mr. McCall has been living in the trailer on the right-of-way of a graveled state road that runs along the property in question. His rented trailer has been situated within 50 feet of where

New Coater And Rebuilding Of No. 10 Paper Machine Slated At Olin

Unique Coated Lightweight Paper, Glen-Cote Is Developed

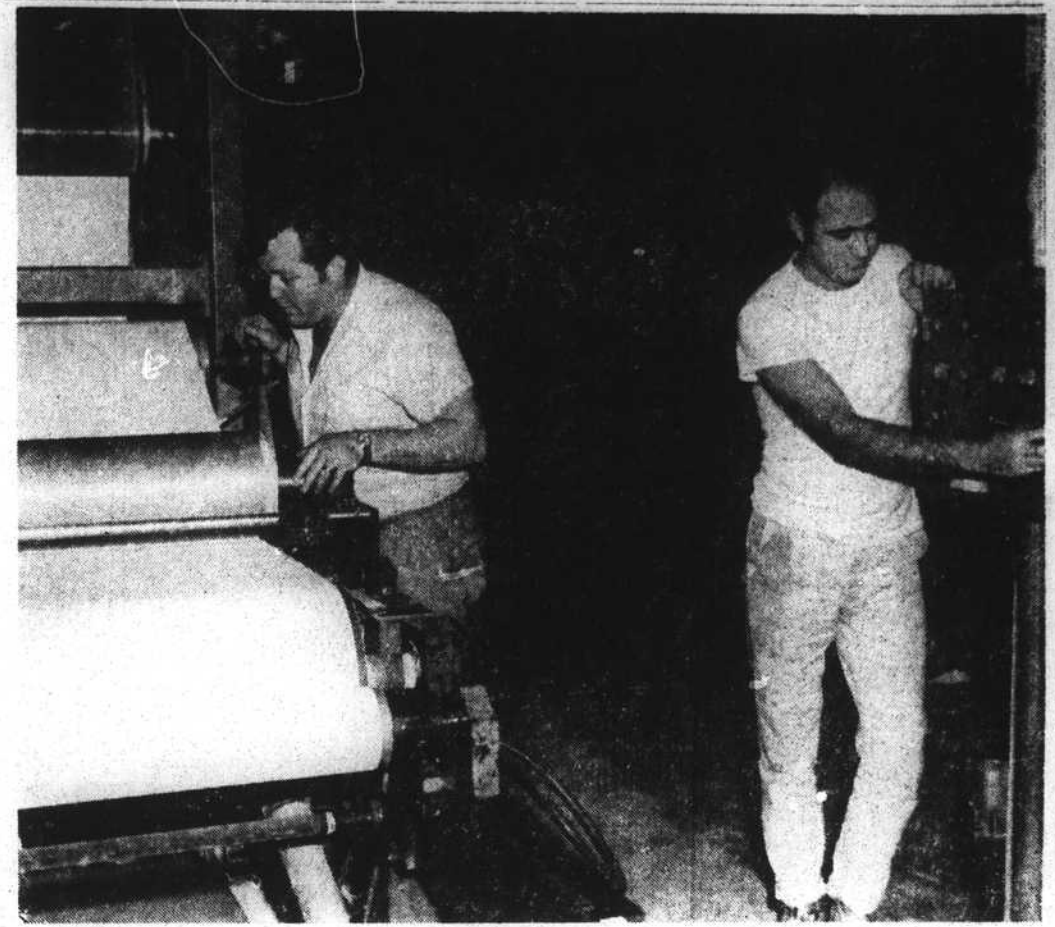

Ecusta Paper Division soon will make a new thrust into printing paper markets with Glen-Cote, a unique coated lightweight printing paper that was developed at Pisgah Forest especially for four-color printing.

Funds for commercial coating facilities and for rebuild of No. 10 paper machine were approved as one project by Olin's Board of Directors. The two projects were developed together because of the need to increase base paper production capabilities to assure an adequate supply of base paper for Glen-Cote.

When operational in early 1972, the new coater will be equivalent to the giant step that was taken when Ecusta departed from the scale of the nine cigarette paper machines and erected No. 10. Compared to the present machine on which Glen-Cote was developed and produced in test market quantities, the new coater will combine large capacity with superior instrumentation and controls. The new building, to be erected adjacent to the glassine calendar building, will house not only the coater but modern equipment for coating make-up and roll handling.

Division Vice President W. F. Taylor, Jr., expressing confidence in the future of Glen-Cote, said that the multi-million-dollar program will solidify Ecusta's broad penetration

At "Brainstorming" Session

Many Ideas For Community Improvement Made Tuesday

Minor Traffic Changes

Police Chief Cautions Drivers On Intersections

Brevard Police Chief J. C. Rowe has cautioned local drivers on two local traffic points that could be the causes of traffic accidents.

One is the intersection at Caldwell and E. Broad Street across from Brevard College's new Sims Student Center. The other is the intersection of Caldwell and U. S. 64 West on the other side of Brevard.

"The car entering E. Broad from Caldwell, even with the green traffic signal, must now yield to one entering Broad from the new road beside the Student Center in any 4-way intersection," says Chief Rowe. "This is now a 4-way intersection in —Turn to Page Five

The first annual "brainstorming" session of the Brevard Chamber of Commerce Tuesday night in the Brevard College cafeteria was declared highly successful, and a similar event will be staged again in the near future. Over 100 persons attended.

Dr. Milton Massey, the president, presided over the brief business session that preceded small group sessions.

From these came many suggestions for community improvements.

Dr. Massey said that each world be studied and put into proper channels for further action.

Many committee reports were heard.

Charles L. Russell told of work of the advertising committee and a financial report was given by Ray N. Simmons, treasurer. Larry Turner, recording secretary, read minutes of the last meeting.

Ralph H. Parsney, Jr., chairman of the Highway committee, said that his group had met

"The Glass Menagerie"

Little Theatre Rehearsing Final Play Of The Season

Rehearsals are in progress at The Brevard Little Theatre for the third and final production of the 1970-71 Season.

This play will be the Tennessee Williams classic, "The Glass Menagerie," which enjoyed great success as a Broadway production, a movie, and in countless performances by Repertory Companies and Little Theatre groups all over the world.

This is a play which requires a very strong cast and expert direction and for this Brevard presentation, the BLT has both.

Jeanette Austin, as the mother, has been delighting BLT audiences for years, (Both on and off the stage.)

Hugo Martin and Joann Dehon, as the son and daughter, continue the excellent acting which they have previously demonstrated in "Mary, Mary" and "The Wheeler - Dealers."

And Dr. Jim Keeley, as the gentleman caller, provides another one of his sterling performances. Jim won last year's Best Actor award for his hilarious characterization in "The Wheeler - Dealers."

The play is being directed by Mrs. Maggie Masters who has directed both of the previous productions.
