

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

you for the newspaper ads and Bill Norris for the radio coverage that made our recent auction a fund-raising success. The "Times" donated much valuable space and WPNF gave us announcements and news coverage. When bad weather forced postponement, both the newspaper and the radio station continued coverage until the auction could be held. This clearly shows individual interest on your part and that of Mr. Norris; and this interest and help was in no small way responsible for the success of the auction.

We know there are many in Transylvania county who understand and appreciate the public emergency service the Rescue Squad is organized to give. Few, however, are in the position to be as helpful and are also as generously inclined as you and the staffs of the newspaper and radio station. We in the Brevard Unit consider ourselves fortunate indeed to have your so often demonstrated support as well as the continued backing of so many of our fellow Brevard and Transylvania citizens.

Best wishes for the continued success and growth of The "Times" and Radio Station WPNF.

Sincerely,
Lt. J. C. Rowe

Dear Mr. Anderson:

I am a senior at Brevard Senior High School and I would like to ask where Mrs. Roy DeLong acquired the idea that students are "heathen robots, unable to read, write or cipher." Could she have judged all students by one youth? If so, then she is as acceptable to revolutionary agitation and biased opinion as she claims the students are.

Has she ever seen a classroom in action? I am sure that if she took a few hours of her time one day, she could gain a valuable education herself. Mrs. DeLong has insulted all students and their teachers which I consider to be an unfair act. Would you also think religious teachers unqualified since they too teach?

Times have changed and education needs to change also. North Carolina is low enough on the education ladder compared to other states. Would the anarchical move of not paying school taxes help the fate of the students? Mrs. DeLong's results would be a generation of uneducated persons who could be swayed by any demagogue that happens by. Is this what you want Mrs. DeLong?

Sincerely,
Robert E. Johnson

Dear Mr. Anderson:

I was never so disgusted in all my life as I was when they returned a verdict to Lt. William Calley. It made me sick to think he went over there under their command and serve their country to fight for the freedom of those who turn right around and take freedom from him. It disturbs me to think that our boys' life isn't valued no more than that.

I have a son in combat in Vietnam now. No one knows the feeling of having love ones over there no more than me.

So please I am asking everybody, whether they have loved ones over there or not, if they haven't already written our President a letter of support for Lt. William Calley to do so.

Please do so today. Please don't stand back and let our boys be disgraced and destroyed when they have offered every thing for all of us, even their life.

They wear their uniform proudly. Please don't stand back and let them down when they have done so much for you and me.

The least we can do is stand up for them which isn't nothing compared to what they are doing for us.

to take pictures of the other persons present and to record the speeches made. The major problem encountered by the agents, according to one witness, was the fact that they were unable to tape the proceedings because five Army helicopters flew so low over the meeting that it was impossible to hear the speeches.

It is important to note that the Army was not the sole focus of this Senate investigation. The Subcommittee is deeply concerned about the overall use of surveillance by the Federal Government. The Subcommittee, when it began its inquiry into this matter, requested all Federal departments to reveal what laws and rules govern their demands for personal information.

Much of the testimony received by the Subcommittee indicates that the guidelines which go down through the bureaucracy and which govern surveillance are somewhat meager and often pave the way for autocratic interpretations of the data gathered. Also, it is safe to say, that much of this Federal information gathering about beliefs, habits, and associations is of limited value to the government. Even so, whatever intelligence is gathered and analyzed may go into a data bank, and once there, it can stay forever. An unwise deed or word, that in bygone years would have been forgotten, now is preserved for whatever purposes may suit the government in some future era.

Far beyond the consequences of the moment, the frightening part of it all is the potential for Big Brotherism, and that is why it matters now.

count, sentenced him to a total of two years in prison and recommended that he be given psychiatric help.

On Sept. 28, 1969, a 40-year-old man was arrested by a city policeman and charged with driving under the influence. He blew .32. Had he scored three points higher he would have taken him to Memorial Hospital to have his stomach pumped.

He pleaded not guilty in District Court on Oct. 28th, but was found guilty and fined $100. The man put up a $100 cash bond and appealed to Superior Court.

In late November his case was nolle prossed with leave—dismissed.

His attorney, H. Edward Knox, remembers the case.

Knox told The News that his client had a "totally clear record," that he drove about 50,000 miles a year and that he needed a driver's license in his work.

WHEN THE CASE was appealed to Superior Court Knox said that Elliott M. Schwartz, who was solicitor at that time, agreed to accept a plea to reckless driving.

Conviction in a drunken driving case carries an automatic one year license revocation; conviction in a reckless driving case does not.

Knox said Schwartz told the judge that he wanted to take a plea to reckless driving but Knox said the judge, without looking at the case, refused to accept the plea.

Knox said Schwartz then told the judge, if that was his (the judge's) policy, then he (Schwartz) would handle it.

KNOX SAID it was his understanding that the case was to have been redocketed in Superior Court at a later date. He said Schwartz's father was ill at that time and that the case may have slipped Schwartz's mind.

Schwartz told The News that he did not remember the case, but he said if he did take a nolle prosequi, he did it with the intention of putting the case back on the court calendar at a later date.

After his father's death earlier this year, Schwartz resigned from office to take over the family business.

He told The News that he would ask Interim Solicitor Jerry W. Whitley to reopen the case.

Case No. 3.

A woman stopped her car to make a left hand turn last Dec. 23rd and was hit from behind by a car driven by a 47-year-old man. He had been drinking heavily, according to the police officer who arrested him. He was charged with driving under the influence, public drunkenness, and failing to reduce speed to avoid an accident.

"I EXPECT if he had blown into that tube (the breathalyzer) I would have had to take him to the hospital," the officer told The News. "He would have read .35 at least. He was way out."

The officer said that he and his partner took him to jail and called two attorneys for him. The man refused to take the breathalyzer test.

"The only reason that I kept up with the case is because he told me, 'You'll never try me for drunk driving.' And I didn't!"

The man was scheduled for trial in District Court on Jan. 19, 1970. The woman who was driving the car he was accused of hitting was subpoenaed to testify, but the case was postponed.

It was rescheduled for Feb. 12th, the woman was subpoenaed, but again it was postponed.

It was rescheduled for Feb. 26th and postponed, and for March 3rd and postponed. Both times the woman was subpoenaed.

On March 17th the man who said he would not be tried for drunken driving pleaded guilty to reckless driving, fined $50 and set free.

The officer was not notified of the trial, he said, and court records show the woman was not subpoenaed to testify.

The officer, who is a veteran of eight years on the force, said he understood.

"The more money a man's got the less chance you've got of convicting him," he said. "The less money he's got, the more chance you've got of convicting him. Just depends on what kind of people you're arresting and what kind of pull they've got."
