

Directors Of Chamber Of Commerce Hear Reports

The directors of the Brevard Chamber of Commerce were encouraged to continue their efforts to keep this area clean and beautiful at their regular monthly meeting in the library Tuesday night.

Charles Himes, chairman of the recent "clean-up" promotion sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce here, reported that the campaign had been a big success, and that only a very few organizations did not carry out their assigned tasks during "Earth Day".

"But we can't stop now, and I urge every director and member to do what he can to keep this clean-up campaign a continuous project," Mr. Himes stated.

"I'm sure that if we each do our part to pick up trash and debris along our roads that those guilty of littering will soon get the idea and stop cluttering up the area," he urged.

It was noted that several new places of business have recently opened in the downtown area, and it was recommended that letters of welcome be sent to these firms.

Walter Cantrell, chairman of the rural development committee, reported on recent developments in the rural sections of the county.

Vernon Fullbright, chairman of the membership committee urged the directors to contact new prospective Chamber members and to see that their own annual dues were paid as quickly as possible.

Charles Russell, chairman of the advertising committee, reported that the Chamber would one again promote the Brevard area through an ad in The State magazine. He also stated that the newly printed accommodations lists were now available at the Chamber office.

Hale "Cuis" Siniard, vice president of the chamber who presided at Tuesday's meeting, stated his disappointment at the apparent apathy of Brevard voters.

"Less than 50% of the registered voters turned out to cast their votes in last week's election here," he stated, "and I frankly think that this is a disgrace."

"I call upon each of you as individuals to remember this poor turnout of voters when the next election comes, and do what you can to get all registered voters to exercise their privilege to help choose our public officials," he concluded.

MARCH OF EVENTS
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD NOT ALWAYS RELIABLE | SOME SENATE SPEECHES PRINTED BUT NOT MADE

By HENRY CATHCART
Central Press Washington Correspondent
WASHINGTON—On a recent day the Congressional Record showed Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., rising to introduce a bill on consumer protection:

"Mr. President," he cried, "this bill will allow consumers to band together and file court suits against 'fraudulent and deceptive' practices in the market place."

Indeed, on this given day Bayh is shown to have delivered a total of eight speeches on the Senate floor.

But, Mr. Consumer, you cannot necessarily believe what you read in the Congressional Record. In fact, some days you will find more honesty on a cereal box top.

Birch Bayh, late returning from a skiing trip in Colorado, delivered not one of those speeches. He got to the Senate floor only moments before adjournment and handed the presiding officer a packet, containing the speeches, all prepared by members of his staff, that he wanted placed on the proceedings of that day.

True to congressional form, the speeches were placed in the record, just as if Bayh had delivered them in person.

But the hypocrisy of Bayh's performance does not end here. In one of his speeches he deplored the poor voting turnout in recent congressional elections.

Delayed by snowbanks and the unavailability of a chartered plane to whisk the senator back to Washington, Bayh missed the important vote on the SST. He expressed regrets about missing the vote.

Bayh's practice differs little from the accepted procedure in Congress. Members even are allowed to change their actual remarks during debates so that their statements on the floor seem quite reasonable when reproduced in the Congressional Record.

But before Congress takes off on crusades to protect the consumer, it should add the factor of honesty to the recording of its own proceedings.

● FORMER SEN. CHARLES GOODELL, the liberal Republican who was soundly defeated in New York last year, is traveling around the country trying to start a dump-Nixon drive.

"I think it would be a healthy thing," Goodell said recently in a stopover in Washington. "I'm conferring with and working with those who may be actively organizing a primary campaign against Nixon. I intend in these months ahead to continue laying the groundwork for this possibility."

Goodell, of course, does not rule himself out as a possible opponent for the President.

If the former senator's performance in his last campaign is any indication, Nixon has little to worry about should Goodell be his primary opponent.

● ANOTHER DEFEATED "radical liberal" from years past is back in the news here. Former Sen. Joseph Clark, D-Pa., self-styled "peace" lobbyist, declares that the Pentagon is a greater threat than the Soviet or Chinese Armies.

He is demanding a 50 per cent cut in the Pentagon budget.

Many Will Attend "Future Unlimited" Banquet Tuesday

ment of the "Company of the Year," selected from among the four J. A. companies in Transylvania County. Other honors will be awarded groups and individuals.

The Rev. G. Dan McCall, pastor of the Brevard-Davidson River Presbyterian Church, will serve as master of ceremonies.

The learn-by-doing companies are sponsored by industrial and business firms in the county, supported both by cash contributions and by hundreds of man-hours offered by the corporate advisors.

Each Junior Achievement company was organized initially along lines of a small-scale business, established a manufacturing program, and got into business by selling stock for funds with which to operate.

Each J. A. company has now been dissolved, having completed its manufacturing and sales program. The successes of the companies will be reported at the banquet, similar to reports given by large-scale companies to their shareholders.

The corporate sponsors are American Thread Company, E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., Inc., Mitchell-Bissell Company, Olin Corporation and RCA Service Company.

SHORT WALK — Safari walking shorts and jacket in Galey and Lord's chino from Anne Klein are worn with a short-sleeved, knitted nylon T-shirt in bone color. Belt is bone canvas.

000.00 dollars, of this amount $80,000.00 dollars had to be budgeted out of county funds. Henderson County, another neighbor, had an excellent ninety per cent collection average, nevertheless their ambulance operation was $20,000.00 dollars in the red for the same year of 1970.

In Transylvania County, the Frank Moody Ambulance Service made approximately 350 ambulance calls in 1970. Total collections for this vital service were $4,545.00 dollars, a meager 60 per cent of our total billings. We estimate our financial loss for the year of 1970 to be approximately $18,000.00 dollars. We submit to you that a small business, such as ours, cannot continue to endure such financial burdens as have been placed upon us.

If we are to continue Ambulance Service at a reasonable cost to the citizens of Transylvania County, it has become necessary that we petition you, the commissioners for the county, to subsidize our service. We request that you grant to us immediately the sum of $15,000.00 dollars. This will be used to purchase new equipment and replace old equipment vital to the proper operation of an Ambulance Service as specified by the State of North Carolina. We further request $2,000.00 dollars per month for one year to subsidize our collections.

If the above funds are not granted, we find it necessary to cease all ambulance service operations as of 12:00 o'clock midnight June 15, 1971. We feel that without this subsidy of needed operating funds our continued operation of ambulance service would be an injustice to the people of this county.

Respectfully
Frank A. Moody
