

FROM THE EDITOR'S CORNER

By
EDITOR JOHN ANDERSON

We had a VIP to visit us last week.

He was Dr. Dean W. Colvard, president of the University of North Carolina at Charlotte.

He enjoyed playing beautiful Glen Cannon Golf course, and he was most impressed with the growth at Brevard College.

Dr. Colvard taught on the local campus in the mid 30s, and he said it was quite a different place then. In fact, he was in charge of the farm too, and it was indeed a pleasure to hear him reminisce.

"I hear you're going to tear my rock wall down," he kidded us.

We told him that we were trying to get somebody to do just that for the rocks.

Then he told us about the struggles he had getting those rocks hauled from the French Broad river to the College by mule-drawn wagons.

In addition to his duties at the College, Dr. Colvard served as water inspector, milk inspector, sanitarian and other jobs for the town and county.

"I remember I had to inspect the two dairies once a month.

"The Glazener Dairy and the Osborne dairy, which I understand is still operating."

He recalled that the College had one of the few tractors in the county.

Instead of tires, it had metal cleats that soon wore out. Since his budget was limited, he wrote to Mr. Firestone himself and said the College was interested in the new rubber tires for tractors. He didn't even expect an answer.

A few weeks later, however, factory representatives drove up with new wheels and tires. They were given with the compliments of Mr. Firestone, and Dr. Colvard said the new wheels and tires were probably worth a lot more than the tractor itself.

He said he would never forget meeting the Chairman of the Board of County Commissioners.

It was his first day in Brevard, and he decided to stroll up the hill and see the business section.

Half way up, he met a man driving a horse and wagon. He stopped, hitched his lines to the brake, hopped down and asked: "You're the new man at the College, aren't you?"

"My name is Allison and I'm chairman of the Board of Commissioners and I'm a Democrat. What are you?"

We were delighted that Dr. Colvard could get away from his busy schedule at Charlotte and spend the weekend here.

He deserved a few moments of relaxation because running that University is a terrific job. After all, it is the fastest growing University in the South!

We're also happy that Dr. Colvard is going to bring his Deans and their wives to Transylvania this fall for a retreat. The red carpet is out.

Borrowed . . .

George Washington probably would not be able to toss that silver dollar across the river today. A buck doesn't go that far anymore.

The sum total of the national debt is some total!

Joke of the week . . .

On a wall (at Washington U.), somebody had written: "America is ugly." Immediately below, in another hand, were the words: "Cut your hair so you can see it."

And we also like . . .

The smitten young fellow telephoned his girl and she explained that her father wouldn't let her go out again until she had brought her grades up. After an hour or more of billing and cooing on the phone, the boy friend made one last desperate try.

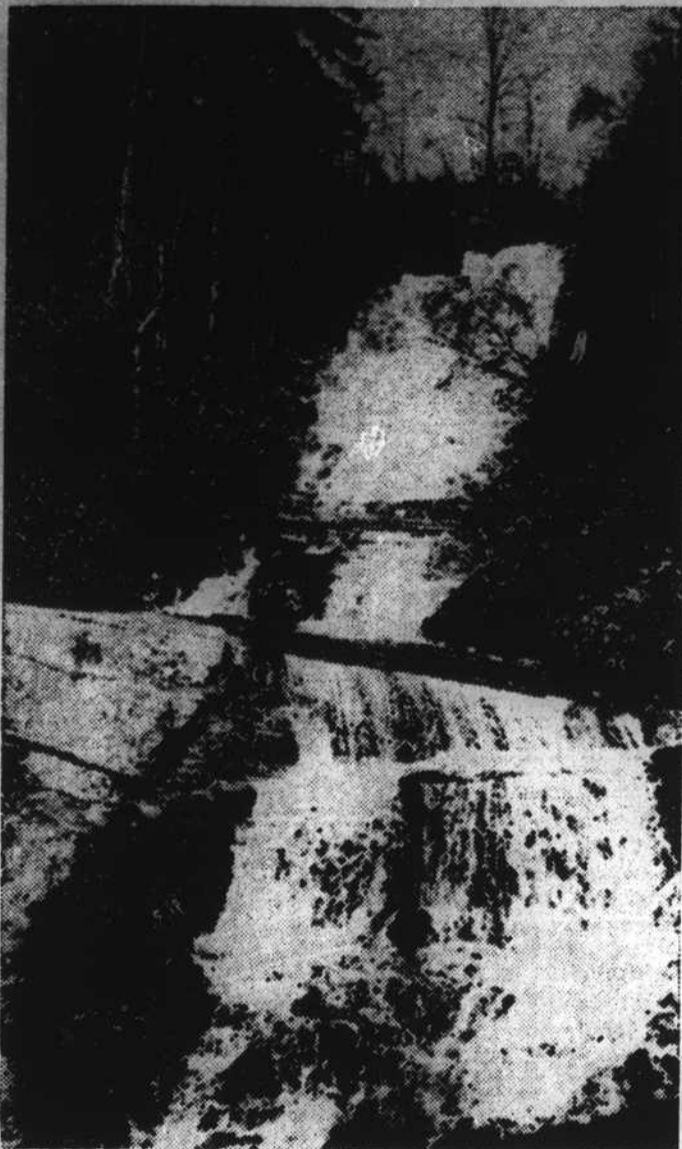

"Darling, can't you come out even for a few minutes?" he begged. "I want to see you in the worst way."

The girl's father who had been trying to use the phone happened to lift the extension at that moment and said bitterly, "Well, young man, I suggest you come over before breakfast some morning."

WHAT IS THE PROPER SOIL FOR PLANTING?

- AN EVEN MIXTURE OF CLAY AND LIGHT SAND IS BEST.
- TOO FINE SOIL WILL NOT RETAIN MOISTURE AND PLANT FOOD.
- TOO HEAVY SOIL HOLDS TOO MUCH WATER, STOPS AIR AND WARMTH FROM REACHING ROOTS.
- FOLLOW DIRECTIONS ON COMMERCIAL FERTILIZER.
- SPADE SOIL AT LEAST 2 FT. DEEP.
- BREAK UP ALL LUMPS, MIX WELL.
- IMPROVE SANDY SOIL BY ADDING RICH DIRT, MANURE, PEAT MOSS, ETC.

Inside WASHINGTON MARCH OF EVENTS

BITTER WORDS THREATEN TO HURT DEMOCRATS IN '72 | FIGHTING WITHIN PARTY WOULD HELP NIXON WIN

By HENRY CATHCAET
Central Press Washington Correspondent
WASHINGTON—Despite indications to the contrary in public opinion polls, some Democratic presidential contenders are speaking out with words that could sow the seeds of defeat for the Democratic Party in 1972.

On a recent day Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., warned that an "absolute radical left-fringe . . . is attempting to steal the Democratic party from the people."

While the hawkish Washington Democrat tempered his remarks by saying that no leading party leaders are actual members of the "radical left-fringe," he added: "It is quite clear that some run the risk of marching to its drums."

"They are having trouble hearing the voice of the people because the noise from the absolute left is so loud. I am afraid that by wooing this faction, by apologizing for it, by excusing it and glorifying it, the Democratic Party can be dragged down to defeat."

The same day left-wing Sen. George McGovern, D-S.C., was charging that his fellow Democratic contenders were losing their credibility by talking military budget cuts while voting against the reduction of U.S. forces in Europe.

For the first time in his campaign he called names—Senators Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, and Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn.—and asserted that they have suffered "a serious blow to any credibility they have."

● MUSKIE OUT FRONT—Things are looking good for the Democrats in the polls, however. In California they show Muskie holding a slight lead over President Nixon in his home state.

National polls indicate Muskie is well ahead of the Republican President. And of possibly greater importance, early polls in presidential primary states give Muskie a commanding lead against other Democratic contenders.

But the battle for the nomination has hardly begun. And the months of intra-party fighting that lie ahead could do much to collapse the now-promising challenge to President Nixon.

Henry Jackson—Washington's "Senator from Boeing," the defender of the SST and U.S. military superiority—has next to no chance to win the Democratic presidential nomination.

● SCARS AHEAD—But this political posture represents the views of the so-called working man—long the backbone of the Democratic party. If and when he launches a serious bid for the nomination, his charges that the party is in danger of being captured by the radical left will leave the Democrats and their presidential nominee scarred.

George McGovern—the defender of anti-war demonstrations and draft dodgers—has an outside chance at best to win the nomination. But his presence in the race serves as a constant source of left-wing pressure on other serious contenders.

How, then, do you bring the forces of a Jackson and a McGovern together for a race for the presidency?

Strange alliances have happened before in politics. But the general feeling here is that the differences that separate the Democrats are too great for the kind of reconciliation that could produce a united party in 1972.
