Don't take a chance with your heritage!

Scriptures for the blind were first distributed by the American Bible Society, New York, in 1835. For the sightless and visually handicapped today, in addition to braille Bibles, the Society distributes Scriptures in large type and on records, cassettes, and reel tapes.

Revival Begins Next Monday At Cathey's Creek

Revival services will begin at the Cathey's Creek Baptist church on Monday evening, August 30th, at 7:30 p.m., through September 4th.

The guest speaker will be Reverend Jimmy Rose, Evangelist and missionary. Reverend Rose is a member of Tabernacle Baptist Church in Greenville. He and his family are also missionaries to Brazil, South America. They have served two, four year terms there to date and are now home on furlough.

The Talley Quartet will furnish music for this meeting.

The public is invited and encouraged to come.

Wycliffe's Bible, the first English translation, was written by hand in 1383. In 1971 type was set by computer for publication of the American Bible Society's best-selling New Testament in Today's English Version, popularly known as 'Good News for Modern Man.'

Having a limited amount of type it took Johann Gutenberg five years to hand set and print the Bible. Today the entire volume can be composed electronically in 77 minutes.

Tuesday afternoon whether a pistol or a rifle had been used.

Sheriff Milford Hubbard said that neighbors reported hearing firecrackers or gunshots Tuesday night. They thought that firecrackers were being used to frighten birds.

Suspect Arrested

Cook was reportedly unemployed since his discharge July 1970 from the U. S. Air Force where he held the rank of captain. He was reported to have checked into a Nashville motel at 7:30 a.m. Tuesday.

Metropolitan Homicide Sgt. Tom Cathey said Cook was arrested by two detectives after he called police headquarters and said, "I think I went berserk last night. I may have hurt somebody."

Metropolitan police said a search of the 1964 Ford Cook was driving disclosed a loaded .38 cal. revolver with one spent cartridge, a 30.06 rifle with scope, a butcher knife, and two spent .38 cal. cartridges.

He was being held by Nashville authorities on the charge of being a fugitive from justice. Cook waived extradition, and was expected to be turned over to the Transylvania County officers Wednesday.

DOROTHY MANNERS'

Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD - Sandy Duncan, the cutest kook this side of Goldie Hawn, is so new to fame that the bars and darts of the printed press hurt her. Particularly when they are bars and darts about her "cuteness," her stock-in-fey which has put her where she is today. That would be up on the big screens as one of the stars of Disney's "Million Dollar Duck," plus that commercial still playing TV depicting Sandy as an eager-to-please little bank teller who just can't pronounce or spell the name of new customer Jane Popopolous.

Sandy Duncan

It is practically impossible to view Sandy on either big or little screen without a mental squeal of: "Isn't she darling?" But one critic out of St. Paul accomplished it.

Blue eyes popped wide, her hands nervously mussing her close-cropped blonde hair, little-girl indignation in her voice, Sandy breathed, "Do you know what he said about my appearance on the Emmy show? He said I was a pain in the butt!"

Frankly, Sandy is hardly used to any of the things that have been happening to her with breath-taking rapidity. From commercials to Disney to the star role in Paramount's big film, "Star-Spanked Girl," all in just over a year, is enough to boggle the mind of a case-hardened veteran.

And that isn't all that's going on. The day I caught up with her she was between segments of her new CBS-TV series, "Funny Face," touted as providing Sandy's best opportunity yet to showcase her comedic gifts. Dressed in purple checked gingham hot pants with matching top, she looked like a commercial for a lollipop.

"I'd be a lout like that St. Paul character, I couldn't resist asking, "Sandy, how much of this cute-little-girl image you are projecting is really you?"

The look she gave me was level and so was her answer: "What you and others see is one phase of my personality. It is what has brought me to where I am today. It is provided by King Features Syndicate ing popular, isn't it? I feel I should establish myself now in what people expect of me, or rather the Sandy Duncan they are beginning to recognize. Some time in the future I may want to start thinking of characters more diversified. But that's in the future. And this is now." Smart "little girl," this one.

Her background is singularly well-based for a young performer thought of as sprung-up just recently, and in commercials, of all things. Born in Tyler, Tex., where her father still runs a successful automotive service station, she boasts a surprising number of trophies on her mantelpiece.

The Broadway production of "Canterbury Tales" got Sandy a Tony nomination for "most talented newcomer." Her smash engagement in the revival of "The Boy Friend" won her the Outer Critics Circle Prize, the New York Drama Desk Award and another Tony nomination. She's been singing and dancing ever since she was 12, when her Tyler dance teacher hauled her off to Dallas to be one of the children in "The King and I."

When she left for New York at 17, she found no trouble getting work in such hit musicals as "The Music Man" at City Center, and on the road in "Gypsy" and "Bye, Bye Birdie." TV commercials proved lucrative and numerous.

Two years ago, doing "Your Own Thing" in Toronto, she met Bruce Scott, a young musician-singer in the cast, and when the show went to New York, she and Bruce were married in the Little Church Around the Corner.

"He used to sing there as a choir boy."

They live now in a rented, hillside Hollywood house, only Bruce is not currently on hand. He is in the East auditioning for one of the three companies of "Jesus Christ, Superstar."

"I'll tell you a little secret," she giggled. "Bruce's real last name is Goldie Hawn Zuharigdes. It's Greek, and I can't pronounce it either!"

Which is where Sandy—and I—came in.
