Chamber Directors Hear Talk On Economic Development Here

Directors of the Brevard Chamber of Commerce were issued a challenge to push forward with their search for industrial expansion by James N. Glenn, vice president in charge of First Union National Bank's Business Development Group.

Mr. Glenn, former deputy director of the North Carolina Department of Conservation and Development, addressed the Chamber directors at their regular monthly meeting Tuesday night in the library.

He praised the local Chamber's Industrial Team idea, and stated that the "team" concept had proved invaluable in many other localities that were doing an outstanding job in improving economic development.

Mr. Glenn's remarks were well received by the directors in attendance. He was introduced to the group by Ray N. Simmons, vice president of First Union National's Brevard office.

In other business, Charles Himes stated that there was a good possibility that the fine glee club of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill might perform here in the near future. The Chamber went on record in favor of feeding breakfast to the glee club should it come here.

It was reported by the economic development committee that bids for printing the brochure "A Digest Of Information About Transylvania County" had been received by two printing firms. The directors authorized the committee to accept Daniels Graphics bid of $1,000. —Turn to Page Three

Trailer Burial Case Takes New Twist In Federal Court

Transylvania County's trailer burial case took a surprising turn in federal court last Friday in Asheville, causing Judge Woodrow W. Jones to grant a continuance on motions in the civil and criminal cases involved.

The parties concerned appeared before Judge Jones of Rutherfordton during a day set for pretrial hearings and motions in the expectation of quickly settling the situation which has existed since Feb. 22 when a forest service crew buried a trailer belonging to Vernon McCall.

But 90-year-old Cannon McCall of Balsam Grove, who claimed the land also claimed by the Forest Service on which the trailer was situated, apparently signed over his interest in the land, if any, to Emmett E. Owens of Balsam Grove about 10 days ago. His action came as a stunning surprise to everyone—his relatives and friends in the community who have retained an attorney on his behalf; the attorney, Harley Stepp of Hendersonville who told the Judge he had found out about his client's action 30 minutes before appearing in court; U. S. District Attorney Keith Snyder; and Forest Service personnel.

The existence of the latest quitclaim deed in the case came to light when a member of the Balsam Grove community told Stepp in court Friday that she heard about it from Owens late Thursday night.

Stepp then, according to a reliable source, asked McCall about the recent deed. Reports are that McCall said he had indeed signed a quitclaim and was promised more money than he would have gotten in the settlement from the Forest Service, but had only received $50 to date.

The quitclaim was filed in Transylvania County on Sept. 28 and has no money mentioned or tax stamp on it. Also, no attorney has signed the deed. But it was notarized by a secretary for E. G. Ramsey, Brevard attorney who is blind.

Brevard High School's outstanding Marching Band crossed the mountains into Bristol, Tennessee, the first of this month and returned, as it has the last three years, with top ratings.

Participating in the Southeastern Band Festival, the local event which has grown to include the entire southeast, the Brevard band took a First Division (Superior Rating) in Class B competition. Seven individual students were also honored with Division Two ratings in the separate Drum Major and Drum Majorette competition.

Approximately 7,000 band members from all over the southeast participated in the Festival. Activities include a parade through downtown Bristol and marching competition which continued all afternoon and evening in the Bristol Municipal Stadium.

The Brevard High Division Major and Majorettes who were honored were: Lynn Baynard, Lisa Bingham, Vicki Ezzelle, —Turn to Page Eight
