

Brevard College's Music Curriculum One Of The Best

There's music in the air here — everything from musical comedy to opera to classical, light and heavy, to John Philip Sousa's marching tunes to modern, experimental pieces that some call "more sound than music."

Brevard College is well-known for its music courses which have been stressed since the beginning of the two-year, United Methodist-sponsored school.

The broad range and depth of music education at Brevard today is mostly attributable to Dr. Nelson Adams, chairman of the college's division of fine arts, professor of music, director of the college choir and chamber singers, teachers of harmony and private organ lessons, minister of music at First United Methodist Church here which is involved in the physical facilities of the music section of the division, organist and director of the church's three choirs, and dean of the WNC chapter of American Guild of Organists, among other activities.

Working with Adams in the private instruction area and with the three vocal ensembles and band are a number of other talented instructors.

M. Thomas Cousins of Charlotte, former conductor of the N. C. Symphony Orchestra and a well-known composer, teaches part time in brass; and, a part time instructor in strings and full-time public relations impetario is John Eversman, who founded the Brevard High School Band and was its director until his retirement in 1971.

Other instructors are Irene Brychcin, in charge of the instrumental program this year while Joan Moser is on leave; Georgia A. Henson, who teaches woodwinds, piano and voice and is also on the faculty of Warren Wilson College; Jolerd Gentile, part time instructor in percussion who is a private instructor in Asheville and well-known as a clinician in percussion throughout the South.

Carolyn G. Cox teaches theory, private voice and piano, and keyboard in the electronic piano laboratory; Louise P. Miller, faculty emerita, is part time instructor in piano; Marilyn Keiser, musical consultant for the WNC diocese of the Episcopal Church and a concert organist, teaches organ part time; Adelaide Hart Miller teaches local students in the preparatory program and gives private piano lessons; Martha Poole Owen teaches piano to pre-college area students and is secretary of the Fine Arts Division.

Samuel L. Cope instructs in piano, theory and musical theater; and, Harvey H. Miller teaches voice, piano and directs the Glee Club. Also on leave this year are Virginia Tillotson and Larry Whately.

The music offerings range from student recitals to concerts by visiting artists, and includes tours by the various ensembles throughout the Southeastern states. A combination ensemble will sing at the Quadrennial World Conference of the legislative branch of the United Methodist Church in Atlanta in April.

A musical comedy, offered every year, is also to be presented in April and this year will be "Lil Abner", under the direction of Cope; and, March 11th brings a first — a band clinic for Western North Carolina concert bands.

The college is one of fewer than 12 two-year institutions in the country accredited by the National Association of Schools of Music of which it is an associate member and is eligible this year for a full membership.

To achieve accreditation, the college began in the early-sixties to upgrade its faculty, library, curriculum and facilities.

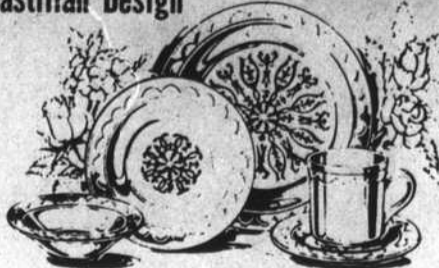

The last of a three-phase construction program will transform Dunham Music Center Building this year into one of the finest music facilities for a college of its size in the country.

The music center also has its own library with specialized records, reference books, individual listening rooms, and is audio-visually equipped for recording or playback into rehearsal halls or auditorium, also to record tapes or discs.
