Cattlemen's Field Day

The Western North Carolina Cattlemen's Field Day will be held Tuesday, July 10th, at the Buncombe County Fire and Rescue Training Center — Robbinson Polled Hereford Farm. This event is sponsored by the North Carolina Cattlemen's Association, the Extension Service, and the North Carolina Department of Agriculture. The program will start at 8:30 a. m. and will end with a tour of the Robbinson Farm at 1:00 p. m. The Robbinson Farm is located about one-half mile beyond Erwin High School in Buncombe County.

For larger plantings, zineb at 1 lb. per 50 gallons of water (1 tablespoon per gallon of water) or Bordeaux mixture at 3-1-50 will give partial control. The first application should be put on at bud break in the spring and three (3) additional applications at two (2) week intervals. Spraying this year prevents the disease next year.

Community Beautification Contest

The Western North Carolina Community Beautification Contest, which encourages community effort and pride in improving the appearance of various communities, will soon be taking place. The contest judging for this contest, which was formally known as Roadside Improvement, will be held during the month of August.

Transylvania County communities participating for 1973 are: Lake Toxaway, Little River, Cathey's Creek, See Off, Quebec, and Silversteen. Special report forms for judging purposes have been provided to all communities entering the program. Judging will be based on reports submitted, and visual inspection of each community by a judging team.

The Leaf Gall Disease Of Azaleas, Camellia And Rhododendron

Azalea, camellia and rhododendron leaf gall is a common and widespread fungus disease in North Carolina in the early spring. Leaf gall is alarming to the grower, but actual damage to the plant is usually slight. However, the disease is more serious under humid shady conditions and without any control infected leaves may become so numerous that the plants are damaged or disfigured.

On azalea the leaf gall fungus wart-like thick, fleshy curled areas on the new leaves. The galls are light green and as the galls enlarge, the surface becomes powdery white. On camellia, especially sasanqua, the entire leaf or shoot with several leaves becomes thick, fleshy and leathery. These leaves are light green to white or occasionally pink. As the galled leaf enlarges, the lower leaf surface ruptures ruptures to expose the powdery white fungus spore masses. On rhododendron entire new shoots and flowers, especially the flower petals of evergreen species, may be affected.

In the home garden where the number of plants is small, leaf gall can be controlled by hand picking and destroying the galls as soon as they appear.
