Prizes Are Approved For Winners In Festival Youth Art Contest

THESE STUDENTS above eagerly explore and involve themselves in language arts, one of the many activities which they enjoy in the Summer Migrant Education Program at Penrose School. The students find learning very fascinating as they experiment with the more modern educational materials and equipment; they experience much through a variety of activities in each area of learning. Their learning is individualized to meet a specific need. The Board of Directors of the Brevard Kiwanis Club has approved prizes for the winners in the Youth Art Contest of the Brevard Festival of the Arts.

The Art Show and Art Contest will be held during the week-long Festival of the Arts, July 22nd through the 28th. The Show and Contest are sponsored by the Youth Services Committee of the Brevard Kiwanis Club.

Many local adult artists are expected to participate in the Art Show to be held concurrently with the Art Contest at "Silvermont" or at the Brevard Senior High School the location to be announced later. Hours will be from 1:00 p. m. to 6:00 p. m., July 26th through the 28th.

Prizes in the Youth Art Contest will be given in two categories and two age groups:

STILL LIFE CATEGORY: Grades 1 through 6: 1st Prize $25 U. S. Savings Bond; 2nd Prize $10, and 3rd Prize $5. In the age group of Junior and Senior High School the three prizes are the same.

LANDSCAPE CATEGORY: Age group grades 1 through 6: 1st Prize $25 U. S. Savings Bond; 2nd Prize $10, and 3rd Prize $5. In the Junior and Senior High School age group, the three prizes are the same.

Professionalism Hallmark Of Brevard Music Center

Most area music lovers know the Brevard Music Center is a mecca for the performing arts with renowned guest soloists stuning opera productions, concerts, and musicals.

The hallmark of Brevard Music Center has become professionalism but such a hallmark is not easily attained. Long years of study and practice are required and behind every stunning performance there are innumerable hours of study and practice.

First and foremost, the Center is an educational institution and the fruits of that education are seen in the alumni of the Center long years after they have concluded summers of study at the Center. There is, however, a more immediate recognition of study and education. Stage center during weeknight and days at the Center is the youth who has come to the Center to learn from master musicians. The youth dresses for a concert, calms his butterflies, tunes his instrument, and appears in concert with the Transylvania Youth Orchestra, Transylvania Wind Ensemble, or in student recitals seen every Wednesday afternoon at the Center.

In concert he is under the masterful batons of such talented conductors as Robert Barr, Ward Woodbury or Mario Mancinelli. These professionals spend long hours readying for one concert to last a mere two hours. Program planning, auditions, rehearsals, and individual attention consume much of their time but still makes them available to the student for instruction, advice, counsel, and fellowship.

In a few days or a few weeks the youth orchestra is molded into a workable, professional sounding symphony that can delight audiences. The experience and exposure afforded students with weekday and weeknight concerts provides an important stepping stone for their individual careers. They quickly reach the point where the Center places them at a crossroads. They must choose between music as a pastime and music as a career. Even at this point conductors and instructors are available for advice. In the overall picture of the Center, this point is often missed by crowds who attend major concerts at the Center, for they are unaware that five or ten years from now they may see or hear one of these students as a featured soloist at a major concert.

To say students at the Center are amateurs would be neglecting an important fact. They may be students at Brevard Music Center, but at the same time they are young professionals. These young talents are the stars of the future in the music field.

Brevard Music Center students appear in concert frequently during the season offering music lovers an excellent opportunity to see stars of the future at a considerable savings on ticket prices with no sacrifice in quality.

Ticket information for individuals or groups is available at Brevard Music Center, 883-8338.
