

FROM THE EDITOR'S CORNER

By
EDITOR JOHN ANDERSON

The circus in Brevard last week attracted several thousand people. In fact, the crowds were so large that instead of two shows being given at 4:00 and 8:00, there were four at 4:00, 6:00, 8:00 and 9:30.

The best story we've heard on the circus coming to town was on Freddie Davidson; rather it's reported to be on Freddie Davidson. We haven't confirmed it with him yet.

It seems that Freddie has been wanting some special fertilizer for his azaleas.

So with wheelbarrow in hand, he went to the circus. There he followed the elephants around.

Next year we expect Freddie to have azaleas bigger than elephant's ears.

We read in the paper Tuesday that A. J. Watts is heading up the Carolina Power and Light Company's generating plant at Skyland.

The item was entitled "Watts In A Name".

That reminded us that Lloyd Cash is here to open the new Northwestern Bank.

We should entitle it: "Cash At The Bank".

We learn from Dorothy Sara, the country's leading graphologists, that a person's handwriting reveals his personality.

We agree.

Miss Sara stresses that no single sign in handwriting is absolute and that comparison must be made with hundreds of other signs before a true analysis emerges.

Generally, she said, if your handwriting slants uphill, you're an optimist; if downhill, you're a pessimist; if straight across, you have good control over your moods; to the right indicates extroversion; slanting backward toward the left symbolizes introversion, a pulling back into yourself; and if the writing goes in every-which direction, you're confused.

An interesting chapter on graphology with samples—including those of John Hancock, Edgar Allan Poe, and other famous people—is included in The Complete Illustrated Book of the Psychic Sciences by Walter B. and Litzka R. Gibson.

This should be a good weekend to view the color along our mountain slopes and from atop the Blue Ridge Parkway.

We were reading some publicity about the Parkway the other day, and we ran across a sentence that caught our eye.

It's a clever piece of writing, while giving a caution to visitors along the scenic drive.

It said:

"Leave nothing but footprints and take nothing but photographs".

And that's wonderful advice.

Speaking of color, the height of the color season is predicted for next weekend.

But you can see a change every day.

With fall weather fast arriving, the bright colors will also.

If you don't believe this is God's country, just look around.

Joke of the week . . .

Young Jeffrey, who's just been given a huge German Shepherd for his birthday, looked at the big dog in awe for a few seconds before he turned to his father and asked, "Is he for me, or am I for him?"

And we also like . . .

A theatrical agency received a phone call one day.

"I have three children who can sing beautifully," said the caller.

"What's so unusual about that?" asked the agent.

"You don't understand," answered the caller, "I'm a talking dog."

Borrowed . . .

I bought a bargain waterbed and now I sleep like a baby. Wet!

Going into debt often comes from spending what you tell your friends you make.

What's that mark on your neck?"

"I was teasing my hair and it bit me."

Homemakers To Hold Annual Fair To Climax Good Year

In conjunction with the club exhibits will be the sharing of two events during the past year — the University On Wheels Tour — when some 17 Transylvania Homemakers visited the Mushroom Capital of the world, Winterthur, Longwood Gardens, a visit to New York City and the Amish Farm Lands.

News accounts and pictures will recall the pleasant visit of the 20 family units representing 10 foreign countries as the Homemakers entertained Foreign Students and their families who are studying at North Carolina State University, UNC-Chapel Hill and Greensboro.

Emphasis will also be placed on PENNIES FOR FRIENDSHIP — one of the international projects which has a far reaching affect in promoting this work.

Scrapbooks, which have been awarded ribbons, will be on display. These and the exhibits will be open to the public from 2:00 to 7:00 p.m. with a cordial invitation extended to share in the Homemakers delight.

The Achievement Day plans are under the direction of Mrs. L. E. Callendar, County Council President, Mrs. Randall Lankford, Cultural Arts Chairman, Miss Jean Childers, County Home Economics Extension Agent, Mrs. J. W. Arden and Mrs. John Rhyne, Home Economics Chairmen.

Tree Tip

If you plan to plant any trees around the house this winter, consider this tip from North Carolina State University extension specialists: Stake all trees over one inch in diameter to keep them upright. On larger trees, wrap the trunk with graft paper to reduce injury from the sun and to discourage borers.

Olin-County Program Of Pollution Abatement Out

Government officials here were keenly disappointed in the State Supreme Court ruling last week which ruled unconstitutional a North Carolina law which would have helped industries to finance their pollution abatement programs.

Olin Corporation's plans for the $7,000,000 water and air projects underway at Pisgah Forest are unchanged. However, Olin will turn to other methods of financing the projects announced last April, rather than through bonds that were expected to be issued through efforts of the Transylvania County Pollution Abatement and Industrial Facilities Financing Authority.

Garza Baldwin, Jr., President of Olin's Fine Paper and Film Group, said that the Supreme Court action will change the method of financing but not the charter of the projects.

"We are disappointed, of course, not to have the advantage of a lower interest rate that might have occurred with tax-free bonds, but we nevertheless are committed to the projects. They will be continued to conclusion."

William M. Ives, Chairman of Transylvania Board of Commissioners, and Ray N. Simmons, Chairman of the Transylvania Authority, both expressed disappointment that the enabling legislation was not acceptable to the State Supreme Court. They said they are hopeful that the next General Assembly will correct whatever error was found in the earlier bill.

Mr. Ives said in response to the court ruling:

"I have been in favor of the proposed means of helping Olin and other industries with their pollution abatement obligations.

"I think we need to appreciate the fact that Olin is doing its very best to clean up its share of the environment. We are disappointed that the court ruled against the legislation, as this was one way the county could have helped ease the burden of financing the projects."

Mr. Ives said that he favors doing nothing at this time to change the structure of the Transylvania Authority, that he prefers waiting until the next session of the General Assembly when he hopes new legislation will be enacted.

"Any new legislation would be put to a court test also, which would probably make it too late to help with Olin's local projects," Mr. Ives said.

"The concept is good, however, and it would be of benefit to other projects whether at Olin or elsewhere in the county. I favor leaving the local Authority as it stands until the legislation is clarified."

Mr. Simmons made the following statement to The Transylvania Times after learning of the ruling by the State Supreme Court:

"I regret the Court's action very much. The bond program was a very worthwhile concept that would have benefited all the people.

"It would have expedited the correction of pollution problems, not just by Olin but by others as well. If we cannot have the plan as drawn in 1971, we need acceptable alternative.

"The fact that such support is allowed in most other states serves to strengthen my position that North Carolina needs a workable plan by which local governments can help their tax-paying industries accomplish their environmental objectives."

Mr. Simmons also said that he favors keeping the local Authority intact, pending further action by the General Assembly.

lease — rental agreement. Such bonds could not be repaid from the county's general fund, as are general obligation bonds. They would have involved no pledge of county ad valorem taxes for repayment and would have had no effect on the county's debt limit.

Such financing programs, by which local government units issue tax free bonds to help ease the burden of pollution abatement projects, are said to be allowed in 47 of the country's 50 states.
