Local AAUW Hears About A Free Press

Mrs. Berta Marquet, topic chairman for "Media: Issues in Communication," was in charge of the program, "Freedom of the Press," at the May 14th meeting of the American Association of University Women, Brevard Branch.

In introducing the program, Mrs. Marquet said that media includes all forms of communication and explained that to be free the media must open its doors for the readers to disagree. She emphasized the fact that only a free press can make people aware of the situations that exist by allowing all

The lovely luncheon served by the hostess, Mrs. LeValley, assisted by Mrs. Weiss was delectable. All the members were seated at two long tables with beautiful Iris and spring flowers as decorations. Mrs. Ives introduced Miss Ann Priest as the program leader for the afternoon.

Appropriate to the spring season, Miss Priest spoke of the John James Audubon State Park and Museum in Henderson, Kentucky. John J. Audubon lived in Henderson from 1810 to 1819. As well as supervising his business interests in the area, Audubon spent those years roaming the woods making studies for the nature paintings that would be his life's great work.

One of the best known products of his pen is the "Ornithological Biography" in which he wrote the story of birds' lives, his impressions of their songs and calls, interspersed with sketches of his own adventurous life.

Audubon painted the birds of America life seized, but could not find a publisher in the United States who could accommodate that size, so had to go to Scotland and England to have some 435 plates engraved. The copper plates were engraved by hand, lightly inked, struck off onto Whatman paper, then hand colored. When his paintings were published as the Birds of America, he took his place with the leading artists and ornithologists of his century.
