

Violence, Aggression Clemson Series Topic

CLEMSON, S. C. — "Perspectives on American Violence and Aggression" will be the subject of the second annual College of Liberal Arts Lecture Series at Clemson University this semester.

Film director Sam Peckinpah ("The Wild Bunch," "Straw Dogs") and movie critic Andrew Sarris of the "Village Voice" are the first guest speakers in the 10-part series.

Sarris will speak on "The Treatment of Violence in the Movies" Jan. 15. Peckinpah's topic is "Violence Brings a Message" on Jan. 16. All the lectures will be at 7:30 p.m. in Daniel Hall Auditorium. The programs are open to the public at no charge.

The series brings to South Carolina 12 experts in diverse fields ranging from films and psychology to criminology. It will conclude April 10 with a public participation work shop dealing with aggressive behavior in local communities.

The program is co-sponsored by the South Carolina Committee for the Humanities, the National Endowment for the Humanities, and Clemson's College of Liberal Arts.

"We're going to examine the causes, manifestations and control of violence and aggression in the United States," said program chairman David J. Marx, a Clemson psychology professor. "One major focal point will be on antisocial behavior in the Piedmont region," he said.

The programs are clustered under six major topics: violence in movies (Sarris and Peckinpah); recorded violence (historical); mass media and aggressive behavior; violence in American society; alternatives to aggression; and aggressive behavior in South Carolina.

The other individual topics and speakers are:

— Jan. 30, "The Violence of Southern Lynchings" by historian Michael Wallace of the John Jay College of Criminal Justice.

— Feb. 19, "Determining the Effects of TV Violence" by psychologist Robert M. Liebert, who served as principal researcher for the U.S. Surgeon General's Advisory Committee on Television. Also, "Mass Media Effects: Some General Issues in the Regulation of Aggression" by psychologist Seymour Feshbach, internationally recognized authority on aggression.

— Feb. 20, "A Field Experiment in TV and Antisocial Behavior," Stanley Milgram, who is well-known for his work on cities, crowds and several original experimental techniques.

— March 5, "One Aspect of Aggression Control in a Violent Society" by Kenneth E. Moyer, editor-in-chief of the journal "Aggressive Behavior." Also, "The American Terrorist Syndrome" by Hans Toch of the Graduate School of Criminal Justice, State University of New York at Albany.

— March 6, "Culture and Violence," Marvin E. Wolfgang, director of Studies in

Recycling Program Will Be Broadened

A new program of recycling paper and glass which will involve communities and schools has been announced by Transylvania County Planning Director Mike Epley.

The county and the Transylvania Environmental Assn. have conducted five recycling days in the past several months, Mr. Epley said. "Cooperation from the citizens has been excellent and many have requested that we continue our recycling program on a more permanent basis."

Transylvania, he said, plans to continue and expand the recycling program to include community clubs and school sites. Details will be worked out individually with each group wishing to participate in the program.

The county has a van which has been freed from other duties to work full time in the program, Mr. Epley said.

"On a prearranged date the county van will pick up recyclable material gathered at each site and transport it to the recycling center located at the new county landfill in the Calvert section.

There the material will be picked up by Asheville Waste

Paper, Inc., and Laurens Glass Company. Details of the program "have been finalized with these two companies and will be put in operation if we have enough participants."

At present, Mr. Epley continued, "we can recycle glass of broken, clear, and green. No brown glass will be accepted. Cardboard newsprint, and magazines must be bundled and tied. No aluminum foil, wax paper, or plastic will be accepted."

The county will furnish 55 gallon drums for storing and transporting glass.

Mr. Epley asks that any community club or school which is interested in the program give him a call at the county court house.

FRIEDMAN AT UNC-G

Dr. Milton Friedman, widely regarded as one of the world's most eminent economists since World War II, will deliver the annual Harriet Elliott Lecture Jan. 23 for the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. The lecture will be given at 8:15 p.m. in Greensboro's Memorial Auditorium, and will be open to the public free of charge. Friedman's topic will be "Is Inflation a Curable Disease?"
