Clara, the nineteen-year-old daughter of J. S. Hagins, a well-:c-do farmer of Clinton S. C., eloped with and was married to Edward Mathis, a young farmer of the same town. After the ceremony the couple went to the house of the groom.

When Mr Hagins, who is a deaf mute, was apprised of the affair, he becamed enraged. Procuring a shoemaker's knife, he hastened to his son-in-law's house, rushed upon the unsuspecting young man and made a desperate lunge at his throat. The blow was somewhat parried, but it struck Mathis just below the left ear and cut a deep gash n his neck and throat about four inches in length. The bride interfered and was severely cut o the right han I. Mathis will die. Hagins is in jall and there is strong talk of lynching.
