BITS OF SOUTHERN HISTORY.

Henry W. Grady, the great Georgian, the illustrious grandson of North Carolina, whose greatness shines as an arc light in the last quarter of the 19th century, a century which leads all the other centuries in the world's history, in his address, delivered at Dallas, Texas, in 1886, said:

"The Anglo-Saxon blood has dominated always and everywhere. It fed Alfred when he wrote the charter of English liberty; it gathered about Hampden as he stood beneath the oak; it thundered in Cromwell's veins as he fought his king; it humbled Napoleon at Waterloo; it has touched the desert and jungle with undying glory; it carried the drumbeat of England around the world and spread on every continent the gospel of liberty and of God; it established this republic, carved it from the wilderness, conquered it from the Indians, wrested it from England, and at last, stilling its own tumult, consecrated it forever as the home of the Anglo-Saxon, and the theatre of his transcendent achievement. Never one foot of it can be surrendered while that blood lives in American veins and feeds American hearts, to the domination of an alien and inferior race."

These be heroic words, the subject is heroic, and it stirs the blood with a warmer heart throb wherever the lineage of the Anglo Saxon is traced. And we feel prouder of the picture when the limner is of our race and a grandson of our State.

But this picture has a reverse side. The Anglo Saxon race has had to grapple with a question in Eastern Carolina that has seriously tested the manhood of that great "blood which established this republic, carved it from the wilderness, conquered it from the Indians, wrested it from England, and consecrated it forever as the home of the Anglo-Saxon." When Henry Grady uttered that burning tribute to Anglo-Saxon manhood that had "dominated always and every where," it was true—true as to the old North State, true as to the little Horry Hotspur State to the South of us, and probably true as to some other States. In the old North State, a horde of hungry adventurers, led by Littlefield, Tourgee and the like, came down, banded with the negroes and some "lewd fellows of the baser sort" of natives, took charge of the State government and by military rule, fraud and chicanery made of the old State one vast hell, and threatened it with beggary and barbarism. The schools were stopped for the want of funds, the sacred school fund that had been used for the education of the school children of the State irrespective of race or condition, was applied to the payment of the per diem of savage and ignorant legislators, and other illegal purposes, or pocketed by the vile and shameless managers. After a period of misrule and speculation that beggars description, Vance, with our native people, the better class of northern men, and the Democratic Party in the State, came and drove off the spoilers that were drinking its life blood. South Carolina was in similar straits. She too was under the heels of carpet baggers and negroes. Major Greene, of Alexandria, Va., who was in Columbia at the time, has told us that the South Carolina Legislature was the most horrid pandemonium of a civilized government (so called). The decent Anglo Saxon race were actually discussing the proposition of leaving the State and going somewhere to establish a new South Carolina, where a white man could live. Simms, South Carolina's most gifted poet, in poetic agony said he could not go—"O, our graves, our graves," said he. Hampton said stay, and let's fight the carpet baggers and low whites with the negroes. Let's whip them with their own weapons. The decent government, on earth. A carpet bagger that has the ear of a herd of ignorant negroes, who at the same time is recognized in decent social life is a most dangerous man in any civilized community. Such a man is the putrid product of our reconstruction period. But he yet lives and will continue to live as long as the negro race exists in numbers. Decent white men of Anglo-Saxon lineage, let every man do his duty in this dread crisis. Vance is dead and no great leader has yet developed to take his place. But if we all unite as one man and make a brave and sturdy fight with locked shields and shouldered touching, we will have the carpet baggers, negroes and associates all squawking in indiscriminate rout. God in his goodness grant it.

WAR NEWS.
Synopsis of Events of the Past Week.

The most picturesque feat lately sent out from Madrid is that the Cervera bottled fleet is only a dummy put up to fool the yanks while Cervera with the sure-enough fleet scoots around to Manila. This fake is about the size of Spanish genius.

The invasion of Cuba by the American forces has begun. Six hundred marines have pitched their tents about the smoking ruins of the outer fortifications of Guantanamo and the stars and stripes for the first time float from a Spanish flagstaff in Cuba. Santiago de Cuba is on the verge of starvation. All the food has been seized by the army and navy, and the troops and sailors are on half rations. Insurgents have assured Commodore Schley that all of Cervera's fleet are at Santiago and that only 6,000 soldiers defend the place. The first army of invasion to Cuba is now well on its way, thirty-two transport steamships, bearing over 15,000 officers and men, conveyed by battleships, cruisers, gunboats and auxiliary craft, sixteen in number, having actually sailed from Key West at daybreak Monday. An authoritative statement to this effect has been made by the War Department setting at rest all reports that the expedition was on its way, or had landed last week. The authorities made the time for secrecy was now past, as the scout boats had made sure that the path was clear before it and that no possible menace could come from the Spanish ships or troops, even should the enemy know that our forces were now advancing against them. With the expedition off, the officials feel that there will be a period of comparative inaction for a few days.

American troops have invaded Cuba at Guantanamo Bay, and have been attacked by Spanish troops, a severe fight taken place and the Spaniards are most numerous and most aggressive. The marines from the ships have been landed to assist the troops. They have been closely pressed by the Spaniards and are worn out by the severe fighting. Some have been killed but the Spaniards are supposed to have suffered most.

More troops have been despatched from Tampa for Cuba and are expected to reach there on Sunday. Some of our troops are already in Cuba with marines from the ships. The Spaniards are armed with best rifles and they keep our troops constantly on the watch for night attacks or from ambush. In some of the late engagements we lost four men killed. No official advices have been received of the arrival of troops at Manila but it is supposed that the first sent have reached there. Hon. Spier Whitaker, of Raleigh, has been nominated by the President as a Major in the Army.

An Object Lesson.
We are informed that this town under its present radical administration is an object lesson, or a bunch of object lessons that every good citizen in this town might study to advantage. Our town commissioners are of that type of officeholders that are "all cry and little wool." The last time we touched them was, somewhat tenderly, last winter. It was upon the subject of Poindexter bog. They were somewhat stirred by the outcry of our people, and they talked, and talked, and had street builders here looking at Poindexter street, up one side and down the other, in gum boots and overhauls and holding two fingers to their offended noses and charging a goodly per diem for their show of work. But it was "all cry and no wool." After heavy talk, and some expenditure of money, Poindexter still stands an unsightly monument to the piebald representatives of the good name of the town. They have forgotten the experience of the rainy winter of '97. They hustled round and talked when the winter of 1897-8 came, but it was a dry winter and nobody was drowned or mired on Poindexter, and the monkey hand organ of the piebald party claimed that the dry winter was all due to the owl wisdom of the Solons of the Board. And now we hear nothing said of "Bog street" (sometimes called).

But there's another object lesson that is now on hand that we desire most respectfully and with our most profound and graceful obeisance to present to our "most grave and reverend seniors" and most sapient Solons—and that is the sanitary condition of this town, and, if drowning or getting mired is preferable to old fashion case of typhoid fever, then the present sanitary condition of Elizabeth City is a more important subject for the consideration of our city fathers than the mid-winter conditions of Poindexter street or the water works of the town. An intelligent drummer said here last week that he had visited every town in the State and that Elizabeth City was the most filthy town in North Carolina and that unless the town had better sewerage we had better get ready for typhoid fever hospitals and make an appropriation for them. He did not say so to us, for he knew better, but he said so.
