Two Options of Whisky.
From the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

BOB INGERSOLL'S. I send you some of the most wonderful whisky that ever drove the skeleton from a feast or painted the scapes in the brain of man. It is the mingled souls of corn wheat and corn. In it you will find the sunshine and shadow that chased each other over the billowy fields, the breath of June, the dew of night, the wealth of summer and autumn's rich content—all golden with inspired light. Drink it, and you will hear the voices of comrades singing the "Harvest Home," mingled with the laughter of the children. Drink it, and you will feel within your head a blood the star-led dawns, the dreamy, tawny dusks of many perfect days. For this forty years this liquid joy has been within the happy meek and mild-eyed staves of oak, longing to touch the lips of man.

A PROHIBITIONIST'S. I send you some of the most wonderful whisky that ever filled with snakes the boots of man or painted the towns in cardinal red. It is the mingled souls of corn and rye. In it you will find the moonshine that made the marshal chase the shadow over west-fields, the breath of June, the flame, the whistle of police, the hoodlum wagon, and the thirty days in prison for thinking you could fight. Drink it, and you will hear the voices of comrades singing "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," mingled with the laughter of the boys. Drink it, and you will feel within your head a sense of swelling—the booziness of many high old of liquid fire has been within the meek and mild-eyed demijohn, longing to scorch the throat of man.
