LOCAL NEWS.

Mr. J. W. Branting of Edenton was in this town on Tuesday.

The fire which occurred at the John L. Roper Mill on Saturday evening, destroyed the whole property.

We had a call on Saturday from Rev. Dr. Hughes, of Chowan County, N. C., accompanied by Rev. L. L. Williams of Christ Church.

Mrs. Miles Overton, of Newport News, formerly a resident of this town, was visiting friends and relatives here on Monday and Tuesday.

Next Tuesday the Baptist Sunday school will exert to Nag's Head. We hope they may have a happy time. Get your books and lines ready and take a snatch for Spanish Mackerel in the ocean.

The Naval Reserves have postponed their ten days encampment at Nag's Head to the 7th of August. The New Bern and Kinston Divisions are expected to accompany them.

We had an appreciated call on Saturday from Judge Starbuck, accompanied by Mr. Truden, of Edenton. The Judge is probably the youngest on the North Carolina bench, and he acquits himself in his responsible position with dignity, ability and honor.

We were shown on Friday by our neighbor hunter, J. J. Perry, a vegetable curiosity, two twin, well formed and good size cantaloupes starting from a single stem and united along their sides. When they were born nature was in a prodigious and prolific mood.

Tom Skinner, who makes life no worth the living, by living on grass, says that raw turnips is the vegetable remedy for "hippo," and that a bad man can "hodge the devil" for a century, by living on the food that the hebeothete ate in the days of Job. But give us a nice sweet fresh cantaloupe and he can take the turnips.

If we were to tell how many trout and sheep-head the Woodard Bros. caught at one fishing at the Huron wreck one evening last week it would put to peril our reputation for truth and veracity, and it we should, to protect our reputation, give the name of our informant it would surely brand the good name of our friend. So we'll be mum and tell them to ask him, himself.

Clarence Woodward, of Norfolk, Va., was in town on Monday, en route for his home. He has been at Nag's Head fishing at the old Huron wreck, awakens the enthusiasm of an old fisherman and gives him a new lease of life. He says he could see almost to the bottom of the sea, it was so clear, and he was greatly interested in the shrewdness of an old sheephead who had a rusted hook in his mouth.

Mayor Wilson keeps busy. He's hard on offenders, but let him stand up to his official duty, mingling justice with mercy, shielding the innocent, striking chronic offenders, and his opponents and his constituency will rise up a hundred years hence, and if he should revisit the old scenes of his official life before the bird of dawn sings his matin song, he will hear fifty thousand thrifty people blessing his memory.

The excursion of the Episcopal Sunday School to Nag's Head on Tuesday we regret to hear was attended by a down-pour of rain which greatly interfered with the enjoyment of the occasion. A rain is quite a common occasion at Nag's Head, and we have seen it sometimes rain more unexpectedly and more copiously and in larger rain drops at Nag's Head than any where else, but then it clears off quicker and more easily than any where else.

Sea fishing with hook and line has gotten to be quite the fashion at Nag's Head in these latter years. In the olden time it was not so. Then there were two things that were thought to be inaccomplishable, to build a residence on the sea shore, and to push a fishing boat through the ocean breakers and fish with a hook and line outside, in the heaving ocean. We were born a fisherman and yet we never threw our line into the big waves of the ocean. It must be grand, and when, a few days ago, we listened to Clarence Woodward tell about his catching mackerel at the Huron wreck, we almost wished we were a boy again.

The committee of the Elizabeth City Public School met Wednesday and elected the following teachers for the session beginning September 11th: W. M. Hinton, Principal; Mrs. W. C. Brooks; Misses Lander DeLon, Florence Bell, Clontonia Cartwright, Clara P. Weeks.

Joseph Earle Wilson, a bright Hertford boy, is visiting his friends and relatives in town, during a short respite from hard work. Joe is loyal to his nativity and we are of opinion that he really believes Hertford is a somewhat bigger place than Betsy.

On Tuesday we had a call from Richard Etheridge, the worthy Keeper of Pea Island Life Saving Station. He is a representative of the old time colored man—polite, respectful, considerate and self-respecting. He is 58 years old and has been in continuous service for 23 years.

Hon. Harry Skinner, of Greenville made us a pleasant call on Wednesday. He is the picture of good health and personal manhood. He thinks that John Small will be able to get the bill for an appropriation for the Walter Raleigh Monument at Roanoke Island passed. We hope so. It is due to the memory of that illustrious man, and due to the State of North Carolina.

We have now continuous heavy down pours of rain. Last week everything was as dry as a powder horn, the dust of the streets intolerable and the crops were parched up by the drought. Now the danger is that we are having too much irrigation from the reservoir of the skies. He who doeth all things well, sendeth the rain upon the evil and the good and we must be content with His dispensations.

The Life Saving crews have been in town this week, undergoing a physical examination for their position in the service, by Dr. Wood. Mr. Woodhouse of Currituck Inlet Station gave us a pleasant call and gave us much information about that useful and adventurous arm of the Marine Service of the U. S. Government. The Life Savers ought to bear in grateful remembrance the name of Sunset Cox, of Ohio, the originator and founder of the Life Saving arm of the Government.

Our friend, Joshua Whedbee, of Hertford, in courteously acknowledging our reference to his call, in the Economist of last week, fears it left an impression that he was a Republican and disclaims the "soft impeachment." Our purpose was to make the exact reverse impression. As soon as we put our optics on him, we knew he was a Democrat. If he ever was a Republican it was only a temporary experiment, and now that he has learned some lessons in the school of experience we look to his stalwart work for Democracy.

The cantaloupe is the prince of the melon family, and while the watermelon stands at the head of the family, because it is so portly in person, in delicacy of taste and flavor, or in adaptability to all the wants of the boiler of the human system, in portability, and in productiveness the cantaloupe is superior to its lordly kinsman. It has but one drawback. No one knows when he pulls a cantaloupe from its parent stem whether he will get the most delicious morsel that ever titillated the human palate, or a tasteless mass of matter that, like some folks, looks better than is really is.

"Every thing is pleasant" at Nag's Head, is the customary response to the customary enquiry—"how is everything at Nag's Head." Fishing in the sea is a fashionable fad and its a new joy to see an old mackerel pitch at a hook at the bottom of the sea in fifteen feet water. Just think of it: see an old gamy tailor or sheephead or hog fish. It will make an invalid forget his ills that flesh is heir to watch their cunning maneuvers to discover if any danger lies near the tempting bait. And then the lucky snatch. It expels all the maladies of this frail vessel of ours.

The Fish Supply.

The industry of our section that is second to the agricultural industry is the fish industry. It employs more laboring men in this town, than its lumber factories, its professions, and all the odds and ends of trade. Before a boy has learned anything else he has learned to fix a stick and a string with a worm at one end and himself at the other to catch the glittering roach that wiggles in the pellucid stream. The old man returns to it in age when all pleasures have been exhausted. Old from Kentucky, (what was his name) who was over 90, having out lived all his ambitions, who knew Clay from his early life and used to say, "Clay was nothing but a dam suck, found pleasure in fishing with a hook and line and his fiddle with all other pleasures of life had left him."

All created things perish and die before the march of civilization. The mastodon, the giacucros, the buffalo, have all disappeared. All other animals are following. We fear the same rule has governed the fishes of our waters, and the fear alarms us. What a calamity it would be! How much happiness and pleasure for young and old is wrapped up in it. In the olden time, long gone, her-rings often sold for twenty five cents a canoe load and shad were often sold at 6 cents a piece. Every man who could get five cents to invest in a reed poll and a fish hook, and was industrious enough to turn over the door block and put the earth worms under it in a piece of gourd could get all the cat fish he wanted at the wharf, and by padding out in the stream could get as many speckle perch as would make a poor man and his family happy for a whole day.

The fact is our fish are fast leaving us. The sturgeon have nearly all left us in the last few years. Shad are a luxury seldom found except on the tables of the lucky, her-rings that were once in every poor man's frying pan, now sometimes retail at two cents a piece. Is it not time for us to call a halt and find a remedy. He is a wise man who takes time by the forelock. He is a brave and wise man who meets a foe half way. Every device that men can discover to destroy our fish supply is in active operation. Set nets and drag nets, and pod nets, and pound nets, and float nets, and seine nets three thousand yards long, are all doing their best to make barren our fields of waters. Men and brethren what shall we do to arrest this wholesale destruction.

There are only two ways to save us from wretchedness and poverty. Fertilization is the remedy in the water and on the land. Rest restores worn down lands to fertility. So, rest and disuse will restore the fertility of our worn out water fields? But is that remedy practicable? Questionable. The next remedy is to supply the fields of water by an artificial supply of fish. If proper exertions were made we could have our waters restocked without cost to us. The Fish Commission is ready to help us. They have helped us in the past and have put money in our pockets by their kindness. We want speckle perch fry in our river, uniper water, their natural habitat. Young shad fry cannot live in juniper water. Let us put ourselves in communication with the Fish Hatchery in Edenton. The sooner the better.

A Scrub Bath.

Dear friends at Nag's Head: Did you ever take a scrub sand bath at Nag's Head? We had been going to Nag's Head and vicinity seventy years before we found out the blessing of a "scrub-sand-bath." It was only two years ago. It was a new revelation. It opened the portals to a new lease of life. It gave us a new epidermis. Go to your bath house. Divest your integuments. Let your servant bring from the soft, clean, white, fine sand of the sea beach, one bucket full of wet sand. Also a bucket of sea water. First, rub the wet sand on your body from heels to hair top. After a thorough scrubbing, scour the body with clear sea water. Rub dry. Repeat twice a day for a week and then if you are not yourself again, and entirely well, go to see a lawyer and let him write your last will and testament, and you, yourself, may fold the drapery of your couch about you and lie down to the long last sleep. We give it as a boon to our visiting friends at the sea beach. We speak whereof we know, and have seen, and have tried, and, as we heartily wish our friends to share our happiness, we conjure them to do likewise. As Pettigrew said, when he waved his sword on the heights of Gettysburg—"Carolinians follow me!"

The Old Cradle.

The Albemarle section is the cradle of North Carolina. It is the State's birth right. We have sometimes thought that the State was sometimes wanting in reverence for its old mother, and that its eyes had been too much turned to "the land of the skies" to dispense its patronage and bestow its honors. If our memory serves us, we have had but one Governor, and but one United States Senator from the Albemarle section since the formation of the Government, and have had piles of big men who could worthily fill any office under State or general Governments. In addition we have had a U. S. Supreme Judge.

But a new vista is opening up to us and it pleases our sectional love and ambition to hear our section often now referred to as rivalling any section of North Carolina in thrift and business enterprise of every description, and our business men are beginning to realize their responsibility. E. City is now often referred to by commercial travellers as one of the finest business towns in the State. The leading business men have their agents in every adjacent field of traffic, and they are pushing their trade to the threshold of Norfolk, with its near 75,000 inhabi-lants; and when we get the old canal fully opened to trade, and the Elizabeth City and Western Road running, the world will know that Elizabeth City is a surging town at the head waters of the internal sounds and waterways of North Carolina, and that Betsy Tooley did not live in vain.

This may be our destiny, but to fully and more speedily accomplish it our leading and prominent citizens have a duty to discharge. Let us all strike together and much can be accomplished. Every thing that causes the name of Betsy to be mentioned is a step forward. Every factory that is started gives employment to labor and it calls attention to the town. Every move sets a current in motion, that leads to progress.

Kinston is a growing town in Carolina. We saw a very intelligent gentleman from there last week and we enquired of him what gave the town its progress, when it had so few natural advantages. He said it was the cooperation of its business men. They were all ready to join in every movement that gave an impulse to Kinston. Let us profit by the example.

Rev. J. B. Ferobe.

This earnest and laborious shepherd in the Baptist vineyard had a successful revival in his Christian work at Ebenezer Church at South Mills, last week, and it bore abundant fruits. Nineteen new members of the Church were baptised into the fold of the Church, and nine were restored to full fellowship, and on Sunday, at the close of the weeks revival service, three deacons were ordained. In this gracious work the utmost harmony and good feeling prevailed. Mr. Ferobe was assisted by Rev. F. B. Overton, who rendered laborious and efficient service. Mr. Ferobe is an earnest worker in the service of Christ, and has charge of Ebenezer Church, at South Mills, Corinth Church, near Elizabeth City, and Berea Church in upper Pasquotank county. They are all prosperous, and are earnestly cooperating in good works with their beloved pastor.
