HARD ON OUR FOLKS.

We think we have had occasion more than once to commend the versatility and ability of the young editor of the Biblical Recorder...

The Texas editor, in referring to the resignation of Dr. W. says, among other ugly things: "Regents of the State University met last Monday, and as intimated in another item, President Winston tendered his resignation and it was accepted..."

This is an awkward and untrue intimation in reference to Dr. Winston, and only proclaims the ignorance of the Texas editor, for the position of Dr. W. as an educator and a man of learning is a case adjudicated before the court of public opinion at the South, and the talented young editor of the Biblical Recorder knows it probably as well as any man in North Carolina.

Dr. Winston is a well educated man or Cornell, Annapolis and the University of North Carolina are all to blame for it. He is a wonderfully gifted and brainy man or several representatives of the Press of the State are in error, for they have enumerated the five brainiest men of the State and in all these estimates Winston has always been mentioned as one of them, and, as to his not being an "up-to-date" man all his life, and in all his controversies for the University of North Carolina, of which he was for several years the faithful and distinguished President, he was not only up-to-date but ahead of time when his antagonists came up with him and he was surely up-to-date when he stood guard at the door of the dearest institution of the State and beat back its enemies, disguised as the champions of "Christian Education."

At this season of the year there are always many deaths, particularly among children, from summer complaint, diarrhoea, dysentery, cholera morbus, cramps, etc., and every one ought to know that a sure and speedy cure can easily be obtained by taking Perry Davis' Pain-Killer in sweetened water every half hour. It never fails. Avoid substitutes. There is but one Pain-Killer, Perry Davis'. Price 25c. and 50c.

THE UNIVERSITY LAW SCHOOL.

The trustees of the University have elected Judge J. C. MacRae, of Raleigh, to succeed Chief Justice James E. Shepherd, as Dean of the Department of Law in the University of North Carolina, and they contemplate electing at an early date an adjunct Professor, when the Department will be equipped as before while under the charge of Dr. John Manning and Judge Shepherd. Judge MacRae, succeeds to the Law Department of the University, at a time that might be regarded as unfortunate. Of course he will be brought under comparison with its administration when in charge of two of the most eminently gifted Carolinians that the State has produced—two men that had given the University Law School a prestige that will be difficult to maintain. To eminent legal attainments and ability they added a charm of manner and character that made the road to legal learning a royal pathway, "bordered with flowers and sheltered by trees, cooled with fountains and murmuring with waterfalls." That was one great element of the distinguished success that the University Law School attained under the administration of Manning and Shepherd.

Our acquaintance with Judge MacRae is of a transient kind and we have not had an opportunity of forming an estimate of his character. His reputation as a jurist is very high. But we fear he is not the personal characteristics that gave his predecessors their hold upon the hearts and affections of their law students. It is a bare suspicion, not a positive conviction. That Judge MacRae is an able lawyer has been adjudicated and affirmed by the court of public opinion. We take him to be a quiet, unobtrusive gentleman and a laborious student of retiring habits. These are inestimable traits of character which often are followed by late fruitage, but they are not the drawing cards in the scuffle of life, that attain the goal in the race while the former are putting on their boots.

But let us hope for the best. Give Judge MacRae a suitable yoke fellow and all will be well. We suggest the name of W. D. Pruden of the first Judicial district as eminently suited for the position.

DISMAL SWAMP CANAL.

This venerable old waterway with whose genesis is connected the revered name of Washington, has been resurrected, revived, enlarged and renewed, and presents itself to the public under a new name and with greatly improved facilities for navigation. It will be known hereafter as the Lake Drummond Canal and Water Company, but it will be long and kindly remembered, and called "the Dismal Swamp Canal." We prefer its old name. A name takes its character from the bearer of it. Nero, per se, is a pretty name, but it becomes odious from its historic owner, and so, the "old Dismal" is, per se, an ugly name, but from its tender memories and associations it is a sweet name to all our people.

The canal is said to have been projected by Washington. Certainly, he was connected with it in his business interests, and owned property contiguous to it in Gates county, N. C. The original D. S. Canal was a development from a ditch intended to furnish transportation for shingle getters to get their shingles to Elizabeth City at the South end of the ditch and Norfolk at the North end. We suppose, that the ditch was dug with spades, as was the canal when it was made a waterway for boats, vessels and barges. The original shingle ditch was probably cut only some few years before the war of Independence, at which time Betsy Tooley dealt in shingles with the swamplands, and traded her shingles probably with merchants in Edenton who were in the West India trade. About the year 1787, the charter was granted for a channel of trade to connect the Chesapeake and Albemarle Waters, but the work grew slowly, meanwhile contracts were awarded to contractors and fortunes were made by men living along the line of the Canal and fortunes were made on their contracts and on the supplies furnished to the laborers, in North Carolina the large estates of Proctor and McPherson were made at that time.

At length, after dragging its slow length along for forty years, in 1822 or 1823 the Canal was opened to navigation and Elizabeth City took a new departure in business, and from a small hamlet in which rough shinglers from the Dismal Swamp took their drams and told yarns about bears, wild cats and tigers, it became a smart river town with a canal trade in lumber and agricultural products and a foreign West India trade. There soon grew up a trade through the canal to Norfolk with the Roanoke section and the lower sounds of Eastern Carolina, and the captains of the canal boats, finding that E. City was a better town for residence than Norfolk, made homes for their families here. This gave the town an impulse in business that it has never lost to this day, when it is the leading town in East Carolina. It now has a class of business tact, industry and energy that are the equals of any community in the State, and which will enter upon a new career of prosperity from the same causes that gave it its first departure in the first quarter of the Nineteenth Century.

Story of a Salve.

To be bound hand and foot for years by the chains of disease is the worst of slavery. George D. Williams, of Manchester, N. H., tells how such a slave was made free. He says: "My wife has been so helpless for five years that she could not turn over in bed alone. After using two bottles of Electric Balm she is wonderfully improved and able to do her own work." This supreme remedy for female diseases quickly cures nervousness, sleeplessness, headache, backache, fainting and dizzy spells. This miracle working medicine is good for weak, sickly, run down people. Every bottle guaranteed, only 50 cents. Sold by Alex. Wadsworth, Druggist.

DEATH OF DR. CREASY.

Rev. Dr. Wm. S. Creasy, the distinguished Methodist divine, departed this life in Baltimore last week, whither he had gone to a sanitarium to recover his failing health. The doctor's name was so near our own, and we were so often called to explain that we were, as we supposed, not branches of the same family tree, that we regard it as not inopportune to lay a brief offering on his fresh grave, especially, as we have sometimes thought that both of us might trace our lineage to the Creasy who is known in French history as the great French diplomat at the treaty of Ryswick, and who was so scrupulously polite and so great a stickler for etiquette, at Ryswick, that he rebuked the Spanish commissioner because he did not bow himself backward to his seat, keeping his eye on the Presiding officer of the Convention, after he had concluded his address.

But whether or not he is in the lineage of the distinguished French nobleman, Dr. Creasy has kept aloft the banner of the name untarnished and handed it on to his successors without spot, and left to them the priceless heritage of a good name, distinguished for holiness, Godliness, influence and pulpit oratory.

Dr. Creasy fills a large space in the thought and affections of the North Carolina Conference. He was, indeed, the "strong, staff and beautiful rod" of the denomination, and his death has created a void in its councils that cannot be well repaired. We tender our condolence to his bereaved household.
