The News and Observer's Educational Contest.

Joseph Daniels may be justly called the father of newspaper memorial editions. The News and Observer has issued more such editions than any other paper in North Carolina, in our knowledge. These memorial papers have been a most useful and valuable contribution to our departed history. They introduce us to a period and its activities that have not been considered by our grave standard historical writers who have devoted themselves to the more distinguished events of our history.

Every North Carolina student knows the story of "Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence," the Battle of Alamance, the "Edenton Tea Party" "the St. Paul's Church Vestrymen's Declaration of Allegiance," or the "Battle of Moore's Creek." Many of them know, or ought to know who Murphy and Wiley, the pioneers of educational work in North Carolina, were, but who knows who William Bingham or James D. Johnson or John Avery or Joseph H. Saunders, or David Lindsay or Bob Lindsay were?

And yet, they were old school teachers who believed that the fear of punishment was a stronger motive of human action than a gentle pat on the head or a moral succession of the tenderest kind.

The News and Observer is doing this pious work and rescuing from oblivion names that deserve to live but seem born to die. The News and Observer will issue an Educational Edition on the thirteenth of August, we are kindly invited to contribute something to the menu of the banquet.

We wish the space allotted to us would permit a brief portrait of some of these worthy men who taught the "young idea how to shoot," but as it is we must say a few words of memory of Joseph H. Saunders, under whose ferula we were trained and who has been our mentor, guide, exemplar, model counsellor and friend through our lengthened pilgrimage of life. He was the best of men and in characteristics and antiquarian taste was the exact counterpart of his distinguished son, the late Col. Wm. L. Saunders. R. P. C.

Death of Mrs. Emily Overby.

Departed this life on Wednesday morning, at the residence of Hon. Isaac M. Meekins on West Main street Mrs. Emily S. Overby, (nee Miss Emily Speed) aged about fifty years.

She was daughter of the late Dr. Rufus K. Speed, to whom she was a devoted and tender daughter when the infirmities of age overcame him.

She was useful to her friends in her life of strength and energy. She was a devoted member of the Episcopal Church, with which her family had been long identified.

Her life had passed through "much tribulation" that give assurance of the "white robe" that await the blessed. In her last long illness she was tenderly watched over by kind and considerate friends.

Parents, This is For You

Parents, this is for you. We do not know whether you are accustomed to reading the editorials of this newspaper or not. If you have not made it a practice to read our editorials we want you to read this one.

The month of September is less than thirty days off. September is a school month, the month that children, in this city blessed with nine months' school terms, get their books together and go to school. Are your children among the number who will enter one of the several good schools in Elizabeth City this fall? If they are not whose fault is it?

This newspaper wants to impress upon those few of its readers who may not too seriously consider the matter of education the necessity of keeping their children in school and at their studies just as many months in the year as they can.

The time is when the world demands educated workers in every branch of industry. Without education a man is handicapped worse than he who has no legs or no arms. You who in an advanced age, hair white, shoulders stooped, working at hard labor for a dollar a day may appreciate this fact. Send your children to school.

When you have had them enrolled in some good school see to it that they study. Don't trust to their teachers to see that they learn their lessons. Lessons must be learned out of school hours. A teacher has no control over the pupil out of school. See that your children prepare their lessons nights. Help them, take an interest in them and try each night to impress upon them how much the little things they learn each day will count in after years when they must get out from under the parental roof and work for their own bread each day. Send your children to school.

By all means send your children to some school. Don't count the cost. Remember that you are responsible for these little ones existence and responsible for their future welfare. If the cost of school-

Mr. Munden On The Cotton Leak

Mr. J. C. Munden, of Weaverville, in an interview printed elsewhere in this newspaper gives some interesting opinions on the recent cotton leak to which is traced the exceeding poor prices farmers got for their cotton last fall. Mr. Munden after summing up the situation in a very intelligent manner says that if the farmers had not given out information relative to their crop outlook there would have been no leak. He advises farmers to consider this fact and in future guard against giving any one figures relative to their cotton crop. He says government employees are not to be trusted with these figures, therefore the farmer had best keep them to himself.

Mr. Munden's words are worth reading.
