BISHOP SMITH, KNOWN HERE, IS VERY ILL

A news dispatch tells of the critical illness of Bishop A. Coke Smith who is near death's door at Asheville. Bishop Smith, whose home is in Norfolk is one of the junior bishops of the Southern Methodist church and is well known in North Carolina and Elizabeth City. He has preached in the First and City Road Methodist churches here and has many friends in the city. The bishop has been in failing health for some time and has visited many places in search of renewed strength. For a long time FOLK, VA., PHONES 112, or write he has met none of his engagements | E. It is not often that a mother forgets her enild but there is a story told by a railroad conductor that shows this was done two days ago on a road entering this city. At a station not far from Durham a woman left the train carrying with her a child. When she went aboard the train there were two children in her charge but the fact that she by the conductor. When the train started the neglected kid set up a yell and the conductor began to look about for its mother. She was not there. The train was then underway and probably a quarter of a mile from the station. He looked out and saw the mother and several of her friends chasing down the side of the railroad, following the train. He signalled the engineer, brought the train to a stand still and then waited for the parties to come up. The child was then restored to a friend of the mother's and by him carried to her,
