In almost every paper you read, is an appeal for men to come to the aid of the country as it needs men. There has been a generous response up to the present time in many States, but North Carolina has not furnished her quota. This is rather a bad showing for North Carolina as this State has the lowest percentage of foreign born citizens in the Union. When President Wilson was elected the people of North Carolina rejoiced because Woodrow Wilson was "North Carolina Raised" and was a Southerner, now he asks us to come forward and assist him in keeping America unimpaird. Is it our duty to come? As a North Carolinian, and a Southerner, are we to sit in comfort while our Northern brother is fighting our battle. No! We shall do our part. Then we must go in and offer our service at once. We have not forgotten Worth Bagley being the first to die for his country in the Spanish American war, neither have we forgotten the inscription on his monument in Raleigh—Greater love hath no man, than to give his life for his country.

Now that war is an actuality between our country and the German government, it is the duty of all of our people to be loyal to the flag, which our forefathers bled and died for, not half enthused, but enthused to the highest possible extent. In conversations with various people, a listener can hear different expressions, signifying the feelings within. Some of these expressions would make our forefathers proud of their sons should they hear them, while other expressions would make them ashamed of their sons. Many people say things that they do not mean, not thinking of the harm that it may mean to their protector. In the present crisis it is an imperative duty that nothing will be said that will in any way reflect on our President, or the administration.

The writer was much impressed with an article published in a recent daily, written by a German-American. He stated that foreigners that had become American citizens are the most patriotic of any Americans for the simple reason that as they knew the governments of various countries, could appreciate all the more "American Liberty." This is very good reasoning.

Right here in our midst one of the first merchants to hoist an American flag over his store, was a German born citizen. In the parade held here Saturday, was a foreign born citizen walking, accompanied by several of his clerks. This man owns a fine automobile and could have decorated it with flags and rode in grandeur, but no, he wished to pay homage to his flag and country in an humble way. If this feeling among foreign born citizens is the same throughout life country, we have nothing to fear from them, although we may hear of dynamite and bombs in different places, the ones that would do this are not representative of a German-American citizen, they are fanatics or criminals bought with gold.

THE SUPREME TEST OF THE NATION

There has been in history no such call to a nation to whole-hearted service as that which came from President Wilson last night. It stirs the blood to read his appeal to the people of America. Not to one class alone does he speak, but to all, for there is upon us a time in our national life when the service of all is demanded by that love of country which we call patriotism.

The President's appeal is addressed to "My fellow Countrymen," and above all else he calls for service on the part of the farmers, desiring that upon them rests the fate of nations, for one nation, mind you, but of nations, of "peoples of the earth" who are fighting for their liberties and our own. Hear President Wilson as he declares: "We must supply abundant food for ourselves and for our armies and our allies, not only but also for a large part of the nations with whom we have now made common cause, in whose support and by whose sides we shall be fighting."

Emphasizing the cooperative need for great food crops the urgency for this is declared as the President says: "The supreme need of our own nation and of the nations with which we are co-operating is an abundance of supplies; food supplies, especially for the present year, is superlative. Without abundant food, alike for the armies and the peoples now at war, the whole great enterprise upon which we have embarked will break down and fail." Is that not a statement that will put every available force in America to work? Is it not, then only the pressing need of food itself will move upon the spirits of our people.

Food above all things is the demand, and the government will help in all possible ways so that there may be abundant crops. But the call of the President is likewise to the middlemen, that with the eyes of the country upon them, that they must forego annual profits, that the course of traffic must be unhampered. To the men who run the railways and the employees the call is for the most efficient service; to the merchants, that it be a time of "small profits and quick service;" to the shipbuilders that they must supply ships as ships go down, for submarines or no submarines or no submarines ships with supplies of food and ammunition must cross the water; to the miner, that the world waits on him; to the manufacturer and his employees that their work must be speeded up; to those who have gardens ever so small that these be made to produce food; to the housewives that they practice strictest economy, that "this is the time for America to correct her unpardonable fault of wastefulness and extravagance," to the newspaper man that they spread among all the people this call to a service of patriotism for the saving of this nation and other nations.

Declaring that this is the hour of supreme crisis, the President calls upon the people of America to take heed of "the solemn duties of a time such as the world has never seen before," his words a trumpet call to all Americans to "speak, act and serve together," so that as a unit our people may give all their strength for the preservation of the ideals of this nation and for the triumph of democracy in the world war. It is a call which should find full response in the minds and hearts and the skill and the muscles of all Americans. It is the call of a man who sees the welfare and the safety of his country, of civilization, of humanity, hanging in the balance.—News and Observer.

There seems to be some criticism against President Wilson regarding the Mexican policy. Looking at his policy from a practical standpoint, it seems that the Mexican situation at the present time is as successful as it could possibly be. It has been some time since any reports have been circulated that Americans have been molested in any way. Previous to the time of General Pershing's advance into Mexico, it was an every day report, "that some American had been foully murdered." General Pershing advanced and lost a few men, but up to the present time, his advance was all that was necessary to quiet the warring factions. In regard to Uncle Sam it seems absurd for some people to criticize President Wilson on this question, and we earnestly ask that the "knockers" will do a little reasoning and stop kicking.

A ROMANCE OF '62

The visit of Mrs. Kellogg Raymon to Fayetteville brings back to some of the old residents pleasant remembrances, she being the daughter of W. C. McDaniel and Laura Delephone. There is quite a romance attached to Laura Delephone who, during the war between the States was the child of the 54th N. C. Infantry. When wounded soldiers were brought from the front she refused to attend school so that she could assist in the nursing of wounded confederate soldiers. In doing this humane work, she met Adjutant McDaniel, who, was visiting one of his friends that was so badly wounded and under the care of the child of the regiment.

Soon after the war closed Adjutant McDaniel and Miss Delephone were married, and Mrs. Raymon is the only surviving child.

Cincinnati Man Tells How to Shriveled Up Corns or Calluses So They Lift Off With Fingers

Cuch ! ! ! ! This kind of rough talk will be heard less here in town if people troubled with corns will follow the simple advice of this Cincinnati authority, who claims that a few drops of a drug called freezezone when applied to tender, aching corn or hardened callus stops soreness at once, and soon the corn or callus dries up and lifts right out without pain.

He says freezezone dries immediately and never inflames or even irritates the surrounding skin. A small bottle of freezezone will cost very little at any drug store, but will positively remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet. Millions of American women will welcome this announcement since the inauguration of the high heels. If your druggist doesn't have freezezone tell him to order a small bottle for you.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 14.—Assault on liquor strongholds of the country to bring about "war prohibition" was formally launched tonight.

Never since the anti-liquor movement started has the time seemed so auspicious, dry leaders declare, to eliminate at least for the period of the war, distilling whisky and brewing beer.

To divert enormous quantities of grain into food channels and turn the men thus employed into productive occupations to increase the man power of the nation. It was announced officially the drive will start immediately in Congress to restrict or abolish the liquor traffic during the war.
