Ost. 26, 1903 Mr Editor: Slow, but sure, we keep moving on, and fully believe that we keep apace with our sister villages in improvement. We now have nine beautiful cottages finished and occupied with a prespect of many more soon to be erected. Besides all of the improvements for the village thirty in one lot for sale to those who will build on the same, which is finding ready purchasers.

plant seems to be hard to find, but, nevertheless, must be found, as we are like the Georgian who was digging for the gofer. We are out of meat and bound to have it as the preacher will be here for dinner. The boiler house and engine room will be a beauty and up to date steam plant of which we will be proud, and cordially invite everybody o come and see when finished.

Our health is extra good, no siekness nor any cause for any. If a doctor was to set up at Cumberland to make his living out of its people the next thing that would be seen would be a petition to send him to the-well guess.

It has been a source of great pleasure to see the many special premiums to the Cumberland county fair, and proud to see that so many has responded to the call. But if no mistake has been made in the reading of the premiums not one cent has been offered in cash, only for racing. Now as no cash is promised I wish to offer in cash 50 sents for the ugliest man to be seen in the fair grounds with red whiskers, and 50 cents for the cleanest shaved and best dressed private Confederate soldier in Confederate uniform, and promise not to compete, especially for the first LITTLE IRISH. premium.

The Silver Penny. According to high authority the silver penny of King Alfred is the earliest authentic Saxon coin that can be traced with certainty to the London mint. Athelstan, about 928, was the first British king to enact regulations for the government of the mint, but the coinage was debased by the minters during the several reigns following. To such an extent was this fraud carried on that in the reign of Henry I. dealers in the markets refused to accept current money, and when the king summoned the minters to appear at Winchester only three men out of ninety-four escaped mutilation and banishment. Henry I. is said to have instituted a mint at Winchester in 1125, but the English do not seem to have been proficient in the art of coining, for Stow relates that in the reign of Edward I, the mint was kept by Italians. In Henry III.'s time English money greatly improved in appearance, and in his reign took place the first gold coinage in that country. In the following reigns money was again debased, and it became so bad that Queen Elizabeth called in all corrupted coins and new ones were issued, for the first time having the edges milled.

There was good talk at a tea party given once at the observatory of Cambridge, England. Sydney Smith was there, and although he took the wonderful work of the place seriously be had a light manner of expressing himself. The party had been led up to look at Jupiter, and this was his com-

"Ah!" said Sydney Smith. "I suppose you astronomers, when you are ill, are advised to change your stars just as we ordinary mortals are told to change our air."

She Kept Her Word. A funny story is told concerning Catherine of Berain, a Welsh woman, who was known as the mother of Wales, because she founded so many families. "She was first married to John Salusbury of Lleweni and became the mother of Sir John Salusbury, who was born with two thumbs | both to each hand and was noted for his prodigious strength. At the funeral of her husband, Sir Richard Clough gave her his arm. Outside the church yard stood Maurice Wynn of Swydir awaiting a decent opportunity of pro posing to her. As she issued from the gate he did this. 'Very sorry,' replied Catherine, 'but I have just accepted Sir Richard Clough. Should I survive him, I will marry you.' She was as good as her word and married yet a fourth before she died in 1591."

Marriage In Algeria. The farther south one travels the earlier one finds boys and girls arrive at marriageable age. Some time ago a census was taken in Algeria, and then it was found that the youngest married 'man" was twelve years old and that many lads of thirteen had several wives. A divorced husband of fifteen and a widower of the same age were also discovered. As might be expected. the girls are even more precoclous than the boys, and, though twelve is the usual age, many are married at eleven There were found to be 189 widows of fifteen and no fewer than 1,176 divorced wives of the same age.

A Vigorous Retort. Lord Erskine, the famous English lawyer, once met a ruffian driver who was belaboring his horse, a miserable, bare boned creature, and Lord Erskine, who was intensely fond of animals, remonstrated. "Why," said the fellow, "it's my own; mayn't I use it as I please?" at the same time applying the cudgel. Erskine, irritated, sharply whacked the offender with his stick, and upon the ruffian protesting vigorously his lordship replied, "Why, it [the stick] is my own; mayn't I use it as I please?"
