OOT. WORTHINGTON ON MAJOR STEDNAS

In his last published letter before his death, the late Col. Worthington endorsed Major Stedman for Governor. He said :

I would like to say something of the candidacy of Major Stedman, but what can I say of this poble man that you do not already know ? He is not all things be gratifying to any man. to all men, but the same to every body. I have watched for many years to see his star in the ascendant. For fifteen in his life-and his friends owe Judge years his superb charm of manner has Parnell a vote of thanks. As for Judge won my highest appreciation and I Pritchard, he is now heralded as "the would follow him with the blind devo great liberator," and the News and tion with which the old brigade fol-Observer has printed a big picture of lowed Jackson. He is sincere, modest, him on its first page. Judge Purnell in the meantime is said to be "feeling brave. If I were commencing a public career, in whom could I find a more like thirty cents"-whatever that judicious guide? He sees the light and follows with absolute fearlessness. That he is politically incisive is no fault When evil brooded like a nightmave with its unnumbered accessories over the state and the vandal affidavit makers (Kerr, Carroll and was at the door; when his sword leaped Sontherland) whom he had sentenced to from its scabbard he did his heroic jail without giving them an opportunibest; but when the final estastrophe ty to show cause in court why they came, he felt that he had simply been should, not be pucished for contempt. piercing the fabric of error and that That omision was fatal in law od upon his sword was that of Judge Peebles' action, and the habeas reancelasts who would destroy our temcorpus petitioners were discharged by ples and our civilization. He has the Supreme Court Justice Connor. onesty of the educated lawyer; an honesty that is classical and immovavs. the Robeson county lawyers has ble. He keeps his friendship in con also been settled, as a result of this hearing before Justice Connorstant repair. His look is kindly. A little girl meeting him in the street would not be afraid to inquire of him Justices Douglas and Walker sitting with him at his request. These judges her way. He is one whom we can the to and feel safe. He has the key to handed down an opinion, soon after discharging Kerr, et al, in which they the hearts of the people, while his word, made it clear that they did not think like capital square, opens on the south side. His administration of the State government would be neither fanatical nor strenuous, but it would be pradent, nplifting, wise, righteous. The comradeship between chief executive and people would be sincere and and agreed upon a plan to put an end they would love him more exceedingly for his exalted virtue. He bas never paraded before the public the services amend their answer by adding the he has rendered both in peace and in war, nor has he ever intimated that his make the sentence read: "The respond honors have been too small for services so meritorions and distinguished, but to reflect upon the official character or like Cincinnatus, he has confided in the patriotism of every man.
