Extracts from Ills Eloquent Speech-Splendid Tribute to the Southern General Stephen D, Lee has more than once shown that he is a speaker of fine powers, and, especially, with a great command of pure, simple English, and the following extracts are classics, from his speech delivered at New Orleans: The flags of France and Spain, of the Union and of the Confederacy, have floated over the soil upon which we stand, but always over brave men and lovely women, loyal to the best they knew, faithful alike to the living and the dead; a civilization transplanted like a rare flower of France, blossoming in the new world, and bearing exquisite fruit. The Confederate cannot forget the city of the gallant and accomplished Beauregard -the brave and unfortunate Hoodthe city where Jefferson Davis loved to walk and which honored him in his death with an outpouring of loyalty and grief which did honor to the southern heart. Here is Metairie, where Albert Sidney-Johnston speaks in imperishable bronze, and the monument to the army of Northern Virginia, rises, tall and white, like the soul of its great chieftain.

We have lost dear friends and comrades since the soldier who was recently laid to rest at Arlington. Joe Wheeler won his spurs by true and honorable service. He was a superb cavalry leader, and earned, on many a hard fought field, the right to lead where brave men follow. When the heart of our common country yearned to express to her Confederate sons that their welcome home was complete, to Wheeler it was given to show, on our behalf, that every star on the flag was now dear to us and that we were ready to follow it to the very "Isles of the Sea." It was southern hands that set star after star in that blue field of glory, and if any more stars are ever planted there, it will be strange if a southerner is not found assisting at the climax.

Comrades, there is one thing committed to our care as a peculiar trust -the memory of the Confederate soldier. So far as lies in our power, we have striven that history may not lack the evidence of this purity of his motive, his fortitude, his heroism. I, for one, do not fear that justice, however long delayed, will not ultimately be done to one of the grandest bodies of men who ever battled for independence, or, triumphing over defeat, bound up the bleeding wounds of their country.

There are three things peculiarly left for our concern. One of these is the erection of public monuments to our Confederate dead, to our leaders, but, above all, to those private soldiers, who made our leaders immortal. We must not overtask posterity by expecting those who come after us to build monuments to heroes, whom their own generation were unwilling to commemorate. The south has reached a position of material prosperity which justifies both State and private beneficence to honor the faith-

In all humanity's lot, there has nothing better been found for man, than to die for his country. If there be any virtue, if there be any praise, this fate is to be preferred above all others. We feel it is well for those who have thus fulfilled the highest of all trusts-the duty of a citizen to his native land; and whatever may have service on the field of battle has rightly given them a place with the immortals. Theirs was the martyr's devotion, without the martyr's hope. Their generation and their country imposed upon them this high service. They fulfilled it without flinching. They felt that the issue of their duty was with them. Glorious youth, who, in the flush of life's morning, poured out your lives like a rich oblation upon your country's altar, we gray-haired men, salute you ! You entered the great mystery, with the joy of the patriot in your hearts, the cheer of victory upon your lips. With all our grief, we would not have it otherwise. You were spared the pangs of defeat, the shame of reconstruction; nor will it be your lot to totter down the dull steep of age, or fixed upon the shore to watch with weary eyes, the rising tide of years.

I urge monuments to the Confederate soldier, first, for the sake of the dead, but most for the sake of the living, that in this busy industrial age, these stones to the Confederate sol dier may stand like great interroga-38 86 tion marks to the soul of each behold er. Are you also ready to die for your country? Is your life worthy to be remembered along with theirs? Do you choose for yourself this greatness of soul?

Weak Hearts

Ar; due to indigestion. Ninety-nine of every one hundred people who have heart trouble can remember when it was simple indigescan remember when it was simple indigestion. It is a scientific fact that all cases of heart disease, not organic, are not only traceable to, but are the direct result of indigestion. All food taken into the stomach which fails of perfect digestion forments and swells the stomach, puffing it up against the heart. This interferes with the action of the heart, and in the course of time that delicate but vital organ becomes diseased.
