The blare of brass bands. A hazen sun and a turquoise sky, a few clouds later, thro' the blue mountains in the distance. An enormous crowd, making Hendersonville's hospital-ty to the limit, well dressed, gay and talking much horse talk, filling the wide cement walk from curb to building. The store win-dows filled with horse show ex-hibits, harness, whips, ribbons and premiums. And then the crowd again. Always the crowd. The biggest crowd ever within Hendersonville at one time, hun-dreds of them attracted by the principal event of the season here—the first annual midsum-mer Horse Show—which is a suc-cess—a great big success too. Entries were made from many parts in the South and more fine horses are here today than you will find anywhere else at one time. The tandems of Wayne Ray and Mr. Henry of Asheville were among these attracting much at-tention, but to enumerate all would be a hopeless task. Below the complete program for to-morrow, with the ribbons and prem-iums awarded.

The new grand stand at Laurel Park was completely filled with spectators. All the parking space was occupied. There was prob-ably a thousand people present. The car line was certainly a busy situation, and there were car-riages and automobiles without number. There were 14 autos on the ground. The Hendersonville band, assisted by the Gates or-chestra furnished the music.

Until the showers came, at half past one, the scene was a fine one. The horses were superb, the driving no less. The applause was generous and the riders were popular. Dick Brown drove a pair of fine blacks, and made a superb pair of winners.

Miss Burgess was greeted with a hearty applause. Miss Mem-min showed her superb horseman-ship. United States Senator Laurin drove a magnificent pair of perfect gaited horses.

In all, even with the show-ers, the first day's session was successful. Tomorrow will be more so. —Wednesday's Daily

The third annual session of the Hendersonville Chautauqua opens to night at 8:30. Capt. Jack Crawford, the famous poet-scout, is the principal attraction. The season tickets are three dollars, a minimum sum when the quality and quantity of the attractions offered are consid-ered.
