

Five Hundred Pounds of Fruit Cake

Sounds like a heap of Fruit Cake Don't It!

Well that is the amount that we sold last Thanksgiving and if we don't sell more than that this year we'll be badly fooled, and why? The reason is this: "We use only the very best fruits and choicest spices and perfectly fresh country butter and eggs, and most important of all, we know how to make fruit cake, having experience has brought (if the art of blending the fruit and spices perfectly and of adding just the proper amount of California brandy to produce that lingering delicious flavor. Our cakes are baked in sizes ranging from two to six pound. The prices, 25 cts per pound is within the reach of all. Don't wait until they are all sold, but call today.

JOSEPH P. CALDWELL ANSWERS FINAL SUMMONS

recommended Mr. J. Lenoir Chambers of Statesville to succeed him as city editor. Mr. Caldwell came to Charlotte and was connected with the paper for some time. Soon after this Mr. F. Brevard McDowell purchased a half interest in The Observer and Mr. Caldwell was sent for and offered $1,100 to serve as assistant editorial writer. He accepted, returned to Charlotte and was wedded to Miss Margaret Spratt. Surviving as the result of this marriage are three children, namely, Mrs. D. H. McCullough of Empire, Panama; Mrs. Julian H. Taliaferro of New York; and Mr. Frank M. Caldwell of Charlotte. Miss Janie A. Caldwell, Mr. Caldwell's sister, also survives.

BUYS STATESVILLE LANDMARK.
In 1880 Mr. Caldwell purchased the Statesville Landmark and went there to edit it. From the beginning the paper was a success and Mr. Caldwell often said that those years lived in Statesville were the happiest of his life.

While living in Statesville Mr. Caldwell was elected mayor of the town. He served in this capacity four years. In 1885 and 1886 he first became a member of the board of directors of the State Insane asylum. In 1892 Mr. Caldwell was elected a delegate to the national Democratic convention and was chairman of the North Carolina delegation. Mr. Caldwell's second marriage was to Miss Addie Williams of Charlotte who, with one child, Adelaide, survives.

The Observer went to the bad and a morning paper called The Chronicle succeeded it. Caldwell & Tompkins bought the paper and afterwards—the name was changed to The Observer. There was no "Evening Chronicle" in Charlotte until the present one was started.

Mr. Caldwell was never an office-seeker, office holding did not appeal to him. Several times he was urged to run for the Legislature in Iredell and could have had the office for the asking, but he declined. He was urged to be a candidate for Lieutenant Governor and could have been nominated, but declined. He could have been appointed postmaster in Statesville under Cleveland's first administration but refused. He could have held many offices but he did not want office. In the spring of 1885, B. F. Long, now Judge Long, was elected mayor of Statesville for a term of two years. In 1886 he was elected solicitor and resigned as mayor at the end of the year. Mr. Caldwell was elected by the board of aldermen to fill out the unexpired term of a few months and in May, 1887, was elected mayor for two years, at the end of the term he positively refused re-election. During his term as mayor Mr. Caldwell gave Statesville its first start in modern progress. Electric lights were installed the first in a town of its size in this part of the State; a new cemetery was established; the first sidewalk pavement was laid—flagstones which are yet in evidence; and there were many other things, which, as mayor, president of the chamber of commerce and editor of The Landmark Mr. Caldwell did for Statesville.

Hundreds of letters and telegrams poured into the Observer office upon the news of Mr. Caldwell's death, but we can make room for only a few of them. The State officers' come first followed by our Senators and Congress men.—Editor.

STATE OFFICERS.

Merited His Influence.
William W. Kitchin, Governor of North Carolina.
"I regret to learn of the death of Mr. Joseph P. Caldwell. He was of great ability, wide information, undaunted courage. He possessed an intellectual integrity of the highest type, this being his most striking characteristic. By virtue of these qualities and his long service as an editor he richly merited the powerful influence which he always well-possessed. The State suffers a severe loss and deeply sorrows in his passing away."

Always For Truth.

Hon. T. W. Bickett, Attorney General of North Carolina.
"The ruling passion of Joseph P. Caldwell was his worship of the truth. He sought for it as 'hidden treasure,' and whether he found it in a gutter or in a temple he held it up and let it shine. His next most prominent trait was his unfailing sense of humor, a humor shot through with sunshine. He laughed at men and loved them at the same time. He quarreled with 'Deacon' Hemphill for twenty years and at the end they were as David and Jonathan. These are the things that gripped him to our people. They felt that he was their very own; and today North Carolina kneels and prays for her loved son."

Man of Character and Ability.

Hon. James R. Young, State Insurance Commissioner.
"As a citizen, editor and man of character and ability Joe Caldwell stood among the best in our State and left an impress for good upon our citizenship. With rare candor, honesty and courage he did his work and came up to the full measure of his duty. He drew to himself many friends and admirers, while those who did not agree with him in his views, could but admire him and the manner in which he discharged the responsibilities placed upon him."

Served North Carolina Well.

Hon. J. Bryan Grimes, Secretary of State of North Carolina.
"Mr. Caldwell's life has been one of service to his people and his State. He loved North Carolina and served her well. Those who differed with him recognized his power and were influenced by his unswerving honesty. I appreciated his great work and worth to the State, his honesty and his abilities, but loved him most because he was always my loyal personal friend."

North Carolina's Loss.

Hon. W. P. Wood, Auditor of the State of North Carolina.
"In the death of J. P. Caldwell, North Carolina has lost one of her brightest and greatest newspaper men—intelligent, alert and fearless."

City and State at Heart.

Hon. William A. Graham, State Commissioner of Agriculture.
"No one who has been connected with the newspaper business in North Carolina in the last forty years has occupied a higher place than Joseph P. Caldwell in the estimation of the people for the work he has endeavored to do in promoting the welfare of his city and State."

The Mighty Fallen.

Hon. M. L. Shipman, State Commissioner of Labor and Printing.
"The mighty has fallen in the termination of this useful and eventful life. North Carolina mourns the loss of a noble and distinguished son. Joseph P. Caldwell was devoted to his State and her people. He loved every foot of her domain and gloried in the achievements of her progressive citizenship. The people, in turn, admired and respected him. He was scrupulously honest and despised hypocrisy in all its forms. In Mr. Caldwell's hand the pen, indeed, was mightier than the sword, for he possessed the courage of his convictions. Popular clamor carried no terrors for him. Honesty was ever 'the best policy' in his estimation, and he consistently practiced it in his daily activities until the strong arm fell helpless at his side.
"The language fails me in this hour of irrepressible grief, to record my real estimate of this departed friend and his inestimable service to the State he served so long and faithfully, without regard or the hope of reward. Those who loved him most were those who knew him best. Genial, affable, sunny-spirited, uniformly courageous and considerate of the feelings of others, Mr. Caldwell did not live in vain. The many admirable traits of character he possessed will live long in the memories of his surviving friends and generations yet unborn."

Had Scarcely an Equal.

Hon. Edwin Yates Webb, Representative from the ninth congressional district.
"J. P. Caldwell dead I knew him well. He was true to his friends and generous to his foes. A big broad man in mind and heart! Gentlemanly instincts and courteous bearing were kind words said of him and was never stingy in bestowing them on others who deserved them.
"As an editorial writer he scarcely had an equal in the entire South. He had profound convictions and never shifted them with the weather-vane. The newspaper profession, Charlotte, and the State will miss him as only few men could be missed in modern times."

A Loss to the South.

Hon. Charles R. Thomas, former Representative from the third district.
"The South loses by the death of Joseph P. Caldwell one of its most brilliant editors; the State one of its best citizens, whose influence for its progress and welfare has constant and peaceful; the press, a man of fine intellect, able, wise and conservative."

EDITOR CALDWELL AT REST.

Great Concourse of Sorrowing Friends Witness Last Sad Rites.

Statesville, Nov. 23.—With sweet and impressive services the body of Joseph Pearson Caldwell, late editor of the Charlotte Observer, was laid to rest here this afternoon, the final services and tributes being heard by one of the largest concourses of grief stricken and sorrowing relatives and friends that possibly ever gathered near the bier of a North Carolinian.

The body arrived here from Morganton at noon and from that hour until 4 o'clock lay in state in the First Presbyterian church. All trains brought numbers of friends of the greatly beloved editor and a special from Charlotte brought members of the staff of the Observer and Chronicle and News and relatives and warm personal friends. The services began promptly at 4 o'clock and were conducted by Rev. Plato Durham, Rev. Mr. Raynal, Rev. Archibald Johnson and Rev. P. E. Law, all paying brief, though beautiful and sincere tributes to the memory and life of Mr. Caldwell.

The floral tributes were the most elaborate and beautiful ever seen here and it is doubtful if such tributes from friends in all the south were ever laid over the grave of a North Carolinian. Men representative of every calling and industry in the state were present to pay personal and silent tribute to the memory of the gifted editor.

The interment was made in the Statesville cemetery and all those who had gathered at the church followed the bier to its final resting place. Of the immediate relatives here for the funeral were Mrs. Joseph Pearson Caldwell and little daughter, Sarah Adelaide, of Charlotte; Mrs. B. H. McCulloch, of the Panama canal zone; Mrs. Julian Taliaferro and Frank Caldwell, daughters and son; Miss Janie Klutz and Theo. F. Klutz, sister and brother-in-law of the deceased. Here from Greensboro were George B. Crater, of the Greensboro Daily News; Caesar Cone and Col. A. Fairbrother, editor of Everything.

A Bellver in the Right.

Hon. Charles B. Aycock, former Governor of North Carolina.
"Joseph P. Caldwell was a great editor. He had an almost perfect instinct for finding and developing the latent talent about him. His paper was interesting, instructive and forceful. On questions about which he was himself convinced, his convictions were intense; but he was able to see the other man's point of view. His devotion to his friends was so strong that he sometimes erred on their account, but apart from this, he was always broad-minded. He was an independent thinker and a believer in the right and benefit of freedom of speech and expression.

He was as delightful a conversationalist as he was an editor. He numbered his friends among the thousands, and those who were intimate with him were the fondest of him. He must have been to those who were close to him an extremely attractive man, for no one ever stayed for long in close contact with him without becoming his loyal and devoted friend and supporter. He made a profound impression upon the State, its literature, its politics, its intellectual and material development. He was a great editor and a large-hearted man."

Attained High Rank.

Former Governor Thomas J. Jarvis.
"North Carolina suffered a distinct loss when disease removed Joseph P. Caldwell from the editorial chair. Possessed of great ability and peculiar gifts as an editor, he used them patriotically and wisely and at the time of his disability he had attained high rank. He was loyal to his friends and just to those who differed with him, always pursuing the right as he saw it. He built up a great newspaper that will speak for him in coming years to an admiring people."

CONGRESSMEN.

Devoted to His State.
Hon. Charles M. Stedman, Representative from the fifth congressional district.
"I am distressed to learn of the death of Mr. Caldwell. During my life I have met few men of so exalted sentiment, of so delightful personality. His heart has ever been full of love for all humanity, and devotedly attached to the honor and glory of North Carolina. His loss will be deplored by the entire State."

Had Scarcely an Equal.
