TRIPS ABROAD ON $12 A WEEK.

A resident of Baltimore, a sweeper employed on the streets of the city at $12 a week, has returned from his tenth annual trip to Europe. He is an Englishman, and spends six to nine weeks every summer among the scenes of his childhood and in visiting relatives and friends. Each Autumn he returns to Baltimore, goes back to his little cart, broom and shovel to earn and save the money for another trip next year. Deducing time he is away he does not get more than $500 a year, but last year he was able to lay aside $115 for his trip.

He does not travel in state, of course, when he goes abroad, but he goes. His example is interesting mainly as illustrating how much is within the reach of those who make a determined effort to get what they want. He does not hesitate because he cannot have the best steamer on the ship. He cuts the coat according to his cloth and makes a fit instead of frittering away what he has because it is not as much as someone else has and does not seem enough.

The Baltimore sweeper may be looked upon as foolish by some and as a philosopher by others. His program certainly is not likely to end in a competence or even a modest sum laid by for a rainy day. But he is getting out of life more than a mere living, even if he is not accumulating wealth for a rainy day that may never arrive. He is taking life as it comes and not worrying about the future. He may be wiser than some others who have an excess of foresight.—Intannapolis Star.

MISS SANTA CLAUS

With joyful heart, on dainty toes,
Her eyes a-shine, each cheek a rose,
Well laden with her presents goes
The Christmas maid.

In Santa's task she claims a share,
And bears her gifts with thoughtful care,
While Love attends her everywhere,
A willing aid.

Oh, Santa, take a friendly tip,
Unless you want to lose your grip,
Don't let her make another trip
In all your days.

For she's a vision, so complete,
So captivating, fair and sweet,
That she has got you surely beat
A hundred ways.

HENDERSON CO. REMINISCENCES.

Pass and Repass—Blue Ridge—Blue Skies.
(By Thos. J. Rickman.)
Editor Democrat:

Last week it was the pleasure of the writer to again pass over a lovely part of Henderson. Ascending the dividing ridge, near Rugby community, and looking westward, there loomed up the picturesque and lonely Pisgah's top with the most lovely, of all the river valleys lying between French Broad and Mills River, the smaller peaks standing around and looking up to old Pisgah, through the bluest of blue skies, were the rat, old Funney Top, Slate Rock Mountain, Laurel Mountain, Black Mountain, Forge Mountain, Syniard Mountain, Mill Knob, Cochran Mountain running toward Buncombe county, and numerous smaller peaks too tedious to mention. Pausing on the top of this Rugby dividing ridge, to glance in the opposite direction, eastward, spread out before your eyes, the Cone Creek and Ochiawaha valley and rising in the beyond, were Tryon Mountain, Sugar Loaf, Bear Wallow, Burneys Mountain and the never ending great divide, the Blue Ridge. We muts al lthe time say, the older man and woman, have their day and generation and pass on, but this grand blue "Land of the Sky" and these blue mountain tops, which have stood and watched for ages, were never younger, and more beautiful than today. How wonderful are such statements, and yet nothing so true!

Mr. Editor, this is what is constantly being called the young people's day and generation, and so it is, and now is your chance to be useful with your weekly journal. While we in good old Henderson and surroundings, are happy and glad some, yet there never was a time in the world's history that mankind so needed the salve for sadness, as at the close of this year 1915. Look across the broad Atlantic and alas! what a picture is to be seen! But as we are unable to control, or influence these mad nations, it is not worth our while to brood in sadness. We can the rather rejoice that our own blessed land was never farther from the accursed war spirit than now. We can all say and exclaim, "Peace, sweet peace, 'tis the gift of God to man!"

Passing along where one has gone by, amusing incidents will often be brought to mind. We passed by on this trip, near where was a country meeting house, and associations by-gone are brought to mind. As the crowd met in the grove waiting for the people to gather and the hour arrive—men and women gather from various directions—when a somewhat optimistic fellow inquired of the crowd why it was that egotistic man put himself up as being all in all. No woman, he said was allowed to stand up in the pulpit and preach, nor was she expected, he said, to pray in public, make a speech, or hold office or anything but stay at home and cook and take care of the house and children. Nobody ventured to explain the problem till a certain wag, well known in the community, spoke up and said, "Boys, I thought any of you had sense enough to answer all such questions. Don't you know it would never do for women to do their own praying? If she prayed for one thing, her husband would be certain to pray for another thing. When a man wanted dry weather to cure his hay, she would be praying for rain; when the corn would be twisted with the drouth, she would still be praying for sun-shiny days: what does a woman know about weather, any way? No sir! it would never do, women must depend on man for her preaching and praying. And what is further, women are so much better than men, it would scare me to death to hear a good woman preach I would be afraid to go near. I would just fall down and tremble myself to death. No boys, I surely do hope there is some way to keep them from going at it, for I tell you the preaching of women is the beginning of trouble."

The crowd seemed to know nothing else to do, but take our wag for it, and at the suggestion of the church leader, all fled into the church for services, all of which was conducted by men the women seeming to be onlookers, but our word for it, matters will hardly remain so forever. Who now believes the doctrine our wag taught any way?

Blue Ridge, blue mountains, blue skies, blue horizon, but not blue spirits, nor blue laws, as our early Connecticut friends are said to have had in the early days. We are now living in a time when we believe the more liberty we have, the better we may be. Unconcerned about who or when a man and wife kisses, or what garb one wears; hats on, or off, as we please; everybody pleased to do right, by everybody else, men stand and ladies seated, is the motto in this South-land.

On this trip, we see a yard full of happy little children and young folks, we turn in and find our old school mates, Mrs. Joe Pender, and kind hearted Tom Miller, Mrs. Pender making a yard full of her friends' and neighbors' children happy, helping to train them for useful life, a little further on, Mrs. Claud Morgan braving for her little ones, while her husband is away from home earning the dollars. Such are the scenes in good old Henderson from week to week.

RAISE THINGS.

Blood is the basis of all profitable animal husbandry. Long ago groups of animals were developed for certain purposes by the patient study, careful selection and good feeding of fast-sighted men. Animals which had the desired characteristics were mated in successive generations, and in the course of time all animals in each group came to have certain characteristics. They were alike in form and function and they bred after their own likeness. In other words they developed prepotency, the power to transmit their characteristics to succeeding generations. We call these groups breeds nowadays. And we must use their prepotency or their blood to produce animals of merit and profit; for there is no other source of merit and there is no profit in scrubs. Raise livestock, but raise it for some special purpose. Take advantage of the breeds which produce stock that meets the needs of raiser and user. And having started on the right way keep on that way, concentrating and not scattering the blood influence which shapes the animals to the purpose desired. Blood is the first great requisite and the constant necessity of the man who wants to raise stock.—National Stockman and Farmer.
