

THROUGH GREEN GLASSES.

A Man Sometimes Forgets, and How Jealousy Works When You Get the Germ in the Heart.

(By Old Hurrygraph in the State Journal.)

Nelson McCain was fifty-five years old when he married Marion Longworth. Marion had flirted through six summers and winters as well, in the whirl of social functions at Hendersonville, Asheville, and other delightful summer and winter resorts of Western North Carolina. She was thirty-three years the junior of Nelson. For six months McCain was happy in the realm of wedded bliss. With him love was the beginning, the middle and the end of everything. But people talked. They gossiped about how foolish it was to take a wife not of his age. The gossip came to the ears of McCain. But he loved on blindly; madly. Then he lit his torch from the fire-brand of the jealous field. It was at a social function at the McCain home, Fifth Avenue in Hendersonville, that the master of the house, by chance, overheard two of the guests discussing a mutual friend, no wist relating to McCain. He caught these words:

"Isn't it foolish for an old man like that to marry a young woman hardly half his age, and expect her to smile upon no one but himself? She certainly hoodwinks him. When he is away, then she does her flirting vigorously."

McCain was disturbed in mind mightily. Could this be his beloved Marion?

He would watch her.

He did.

The opportunity to satisfy his now excited jealous mind came a few days later. On his way home, one afternoon, he saw a stylishly dressed young man opposite his residence, leaning against a tree, gazing intently at an open window of his home. He is flirting with Marion, sure, thought McCain. It is positive proof.

He rushed madly into the house to find his wife in the room with the open window. She flushed and quickly crumpled in her hand a piece of paper. "Trifles, as light as air, are to the jealous-minded proofs as strong as holy-writ." To McCain's mind the evidence was clear.

He pretended not to notice her seeming confusion and blushes, thinking she would say something about it. But not a word to satisfy him did she utter. He caressed her lovingly, and made an effort to get hold of the hand holding the note. She resisted. Then he demanded to know what she was concealing from him. It was a plot to deceive him. She denied any such thing. He took the note from her.

"Who is writing to you?" he demanded, a shis rage rose.

"I'm sure I do not know. I found it on the floor."

"Found it on the floor, eh? With the window open, and that young chap across the street, gazing in here to see that you got it?"

"I know nothing about it," replied Marion sweetly.

"Found it and haven't read it!" he stormed as his face grew redder.

Marion replied, smiling, "I did not have time to read it before you came in."

Then McCain, trembling with a paroxysm of jealous rage, opened the crumpled note and read:

"My Darling One: I think only of you. I must see you. I cannot live without you. Meet me at 4:00 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, in the lane, under the old apple tree, and I will tell you how much I love you."

And turning the scrap of paper over to find the name, which was on the opposite side, he paused for breath; his face revealed several colors; his voice modulated almost to a whisper as he read:

"Yours lovingly,
NELSON MCCAIN."

It was a letter he had written, when a boy, to his first sweetheart, but had not sent her. He had the day before been looking over and destroying some old papers. This one had escaped the fire in some way.

Marion's opportunity had arrived. She was slow in letting it pass. Nelson had to give her a limousine and a diamond ring before perfect peace was restored.

And yet, some people say a wife not half as old as her husband does not love her hubby. Perish the thought!

OFFICIALS VINDICATED IN LEAK INVESTIGATION.

Had Nothing to do With Reported Escape of Information, House Rules Committee Decides.

Vindication of all public officials whose names were brought into the investigation of charges that there was a leak to Wall Street on President Wilson's peace note, was voted unanimously last week by the House Rules Committee.

It is understood the committee finds that Thomas W. Lawson's sensational charges were not substantiated; that

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF, HAIR STOPS FALLING

Save your Hair! Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf. There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

SOUTHERN LAND AUCTION COMPANY

"We Sell Lots and Lots of Lots"

ASHEVILLE, N. C.

R. W. Bolling, brother-in-law of the President, had nothing to do with a "leak" and that advance information concerning the note was furnished to brokers by J. Fred Essary and W. W. Price, local newspaper men, who connected deductions with facts obtained in conversation with other reporters, who had been told in confidence by Secretary Lansing that a note was coming.

In connection with violations of newspaper ethics, the report says a sub-committee of correspondents to determine what change shall be made in the rules regulating the admission to the Congressional press galleries.

No recommendations are made, but the practice of selling short on the New York Stock Exchange is said to be criticised. F. A. Connolly, a local broker, is censured for his testimony before the committee, and E. H. Hurton and Company for failing to produce copies of all messages concerning the note which reached its office.

er of the sum raised, which amounts to $2,045,17, is to be used by the State Red Cross Seal Commission for fighting tuberculosis here in North Carolina.

According to a letter from the National Association to Doctor McBrayer, the sale of seals for 1916 in the United States amounted to $1,000,000, which was an increase of 30 per cent over the sales of the year before. Since the beginning of the sale of seals in this country, which was in 1908, $4,206,051 have been raised.

The result of the 1916 Red Cross Seal campaign, according to Dr. McBrayer, is highly gratifying to the Commission. The returns show that better results were obtained from small towns than ever before.

SOULS IN DOLLARS.

It is now recognized the world over that our dollars are the good dollars and the dominant dollars of the earth. It is for the men controlling the banking interests of this supreme country to determine whether these dollars of ours shall prey upon our country and the world with teeth and claws, or shall have souls put into them to uphold, to heal the horrible scars of war and to life the stricken to strengthen and hope.

This nation could easily increase its savings to ten billion dollars per annum and thus snug sum could be used for the development of our country for the promotion of civilization, and for the advancement of a dupbuilding of the near and remote countries of earth.

While we are increasing our savings we must keep steadily in mind that the only real wealth is common wealth. A superstructure of great fortunes based on a foundation of general poverty and discontent must topple and crumble as surely as a house builded on sand.

We have people with souls in them and we have dollars beyond our most exaggerated hopes. A great American soul needs to go into our great American dollar.—John Skelton Williams, Comptroller of the Currency.
