WOUNDED SOLDIERS HERE

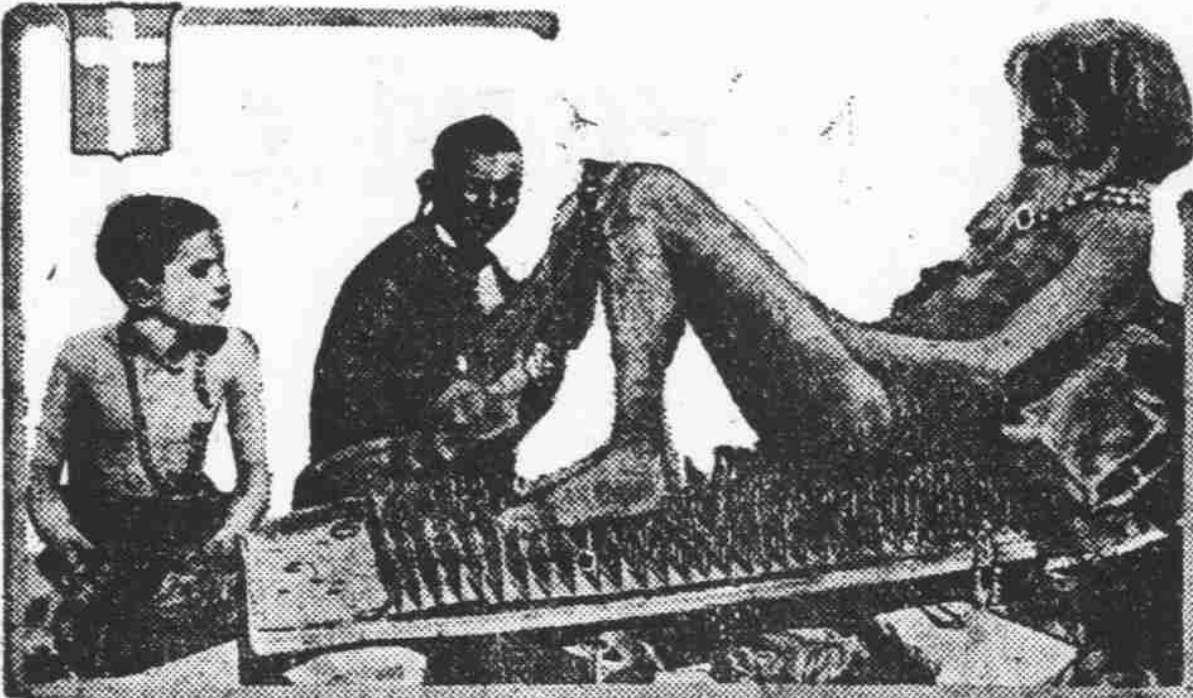

A party of about eighty wounded soldiers and twenty Red Cross nurses from Spartanburg went to Chimney Rock last Friday. They were the guests of Spartanburg citizens and of the Chimney Rock company. Every man in the company had been either gassed or wounded and many of them had been through some of the bitterest fighting on the western front.

Nothing was left undone by the Chimney Rock company that might add to the soldiers' pleasure. They were given a dinner that they will remember and it is whispered that the amount of fried chicken a wounded or gassed soldier can get away with is somewhat surprising, if not startling. The rest of the dinner at the 1 o'clock was in keeping.

This was the first time many of the men had been to the mountains and was the first experience with all of them so far as the wonders of the hat Cave country is concerned. It is needless to say they were delighted and that they enjoyed their too-brief excursion to the very utmost.

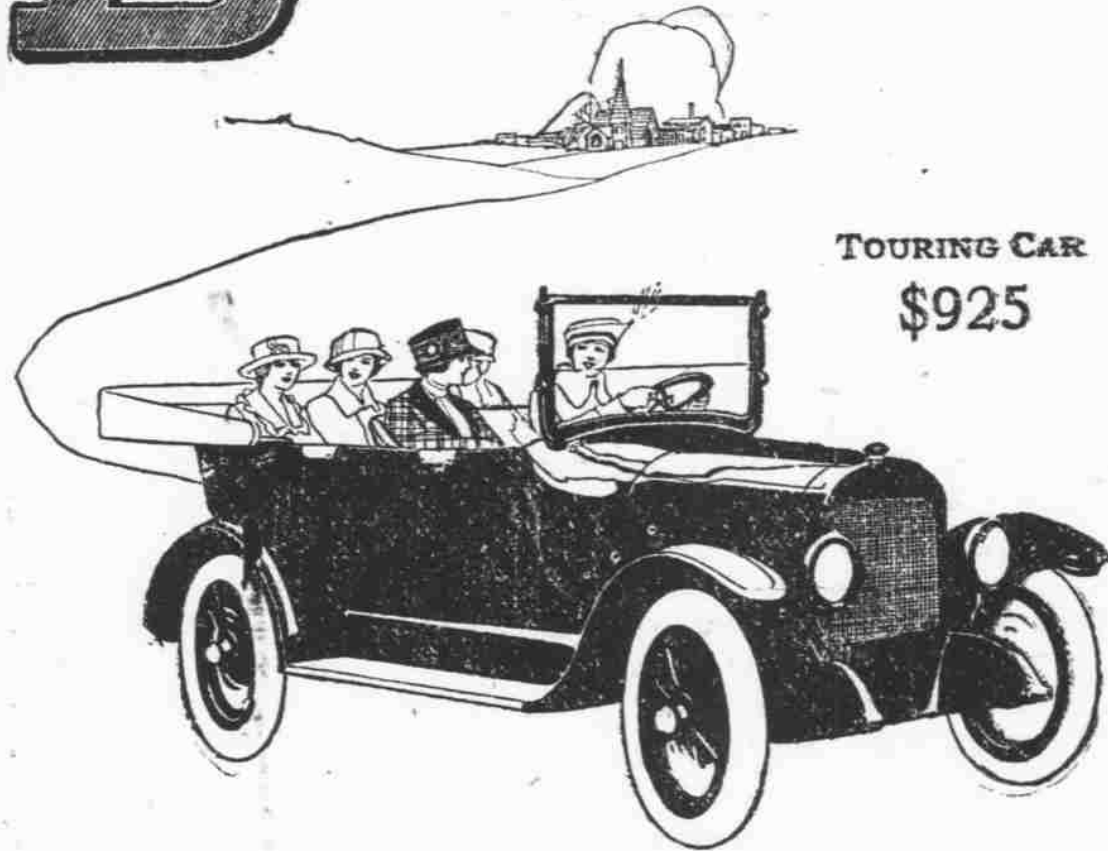

One of the Interesting Exhibits Shown at the Methodist Centenary Celebration

To prove that his soul is above worldly troubles and physical pain, this Hindu fakir nonchalantly reclines on a bed of spikes, much to the amazement of less spiritual observers. The bed of spikes will be one of the interesting exhibits shown at the Methodist Centenary Celebration, in Columbus, O., June 20 to July 13. Whether a fakir, Hindu or otherwise, can be found to demonstrate his power of endurance on it is still an unsettled question with celebration officials.

DORT

Quality Goes Clear Through

The soundest reasons for your owning a Dort are furnished by the actual experiences of Dort owners.

They will tell you that the car travels smoothly and comfortably.

They will speak in the same satisfied terms of the mileage it gives in gas and oil, and on tires—longer mileage per gallon, you will find, than what is commonly regarded as good mileage.

They will tell you, also, that it requires a minimum amount of service-attention to keep it in fit condition and continuous service.

MARRIAGE BY MAIL

Sadness and settled melancholy fairly oozed from him as he faced the Carolina Terrace clerk and timidly asked the price of a room without a bath. His coat collar was pinned together with a safety pin and his derby hat was rusty and of uncertain vintage.

"Seems like that's a right smart to 'Yes—she's to wear a blue ribbon and me a red." Pulling his threadbare coat somewhat closer around his throat he touched the piece of silk. "That's her idea. She says she's romantic and reads considerable after Laura Jean Libby and Ella Wheeler Wilcox. Blue's her color, she says."

"Literary, I suppose," answered the clerk, wondering in his soul what kind of a surprise party was in store for the prospective bridegroom. After thinking it over he decided it might be a sort of an even bet, at that.

"Yes, that was the word she used, literary. She just dotes on Laura and says Ella can make her cry any time she wants to—her pieces are that sad, you know. But I didn't know anything about them six children when I wrote to her to come on. She's from South Carolina." Pensive and mournful, he looked at the big clock back of the clerk.

"It's near train time now," said the clerk. "The hotel automobile will be going in a minute. The fare's—"

"I reckon I'll walk," said the serious man. "That's cheaper, and them six children—"

And walking slowly and sadly the prospective bridegroom left the Carolina Terrace and headed for the station, his stooped shoulders revealing a settled depression that was almost discouragement.

"I reckoned on a dollar and you want—"

"Yes," said the clerk, flashing the twelve-cylinder diamond sparkling on his finger.

"I'll be back," said the melancholy one. "I'm expecting my wife—that is to be—on the next train from Spartanburg."

"She's got six children, I might," a deeper note of gloom entering his quavering voice, "I might want two rooms, you see."

The impassive clerk, who meets all sorts and conditions of men and women during the day's work, offered no encouragement.

"That would cost more," he said. "You mean the children or the room?"

"Both."

"Yes, I reckon that's so, too. I answered an ad in a paper, you know, about a beautiful widow woman being lonely and wanting a partner to travel life's thorny pathway with her. The letter was writ real nice. But the paper didn't say nothing about six children. You never can believe what you see in the papers. She wrote me about that afterwards. I kind of allowed it might be all right, though. What do you think about it?"

The hotel clerk risked an opinion that it might turn out that way. He hoped so, he said. Pointing to a red ribbon pinned to the dejected man's coat he remarked:

"She's going to know you by that, I suppose?"

ADDITIONAL PARKING SPACE

If the automobiles continue to pile into Hendersonville at the present rate it is believed that Main street, magnificent thoroughfare that it is, will be quite inadequate to care for them all.

"Looks as though there would have to be parking space designated on some of the side streets," said a car owner, yesterday. "Main street is becoming uncomfortably crowded already. What will it be like on or about the fourth of July?"

It is believed that the unsatisfactory condition of the Asheville highway is responsible for a number of the cars being here. The detours are just about what they have always been. In fair weather it is possible to make the trip to Asheville without risking life and limb. At other times it isn't.

WHAT ONE GIRL DID

The following is the interesting experience of Miss Carrie Lyda, 13 years old, of Route 2. Miss Lyda is one of the most energetic members of the potato club. She writes:

"On one-eighth acre of Irish potatoes I made 20 bushels and sold them for $20. I bought a calf for $10 and a pig for $6, leaving me $4. After this I sold the calf and pig for 5 war stamps and $10 in cash. This makes a total of $39 in less than 12 months."

I am one of the club girls again this year. Have worked my potatoes three times, have them clean and they are looking fine. I failed to get the prize last year on the number of bushels made, but girls, I am trying for a prize this time."
