

Grove Park Inn has taken this page not so much to advertise the wonders of their building and grounds, for most of those who will read it have read our advertisements or visited the Inn, and are convinced that our statement that we are building the finest resort hotel in the world is not in any sense extravagant.

We are contributing to this Good Roads edition to lend our voice and all the influence we can command to the cause of Good Roads.

The value of Good Roads to a section like ours simply cannot be estimated.

A great deal of our prosperity must come from tourists.

Mr. William S. Kenney, who will manage Grove Park Inn, has just resigned the management of the Mount Washington Hotel, Bretton Wood, New Hampshire, the highest price and undoubtedly the most profitable resort hotel in the United States.

The Mount Washington statistics showed last year that 76 percent of its guests came in automobiles.

When will the time come when 76 percent of the guests of the Land of the Sky can come in automobiles unless there is a greater movement in the direction of good roads than we have seen up to the present time?

The value of property depends on the number of people who go to it or live near it.

Land twenty miles from a railroad can be had for one dollar an acre.

Property in one Southern city has already brought as high as $7,000 a front foot.

Get Good Roads all through this section and the public will use them.

The farmer will find his way to town. His children will get to school. Everybody will be more prosperous and the world will grow brighter.

Let the whole section unite in the Good Roads movement.
