ETHEL CLAYTON PICTURES HAVE APPEAL THAT WINS AUDIENCE

"A Lady in Love" is Example of Human Note Struck by this Popular Young Star.

Do you enjoy seeing motion pictures in which folks you know play the different roles? If you do, you are an admirer of the type of screen entertainment which Ethel Clayton has been offering lately. Here is one star who seems bent upon portraying us as we are. Her stories have that intensely human note, which somehow warms the cockles of a film audience's hearts as no lavish setting or "stunt stuff" can do.

In "The Thirteenth Commandment," the picturization of Rupert Hughes' strong story, Miss Clayton demonstrates that the wife who spends more than her husband earns and gives nothing in return is, to say the least, a very poor sport. "Young Mrs. Winthrop" was a deserved success, because Miss Clayton in a thoroughly sympathetic and appealing manner portrayed the young wife who seeks indiscreet pleasures because her husband's over-devotion to business gives frequent periods of loneliness. Surely a common enough state of affairs.

And now Miss Clayton is coming to the Movie Theatre on Feb. 8th in another of those attractively human dramas, "A Lady in Love." In this one, she is a sheltered convent girl, in love with love, who marries unwisely and lives to rue it. Of course, there is another man, and happiness awaits them at the end of a troublous trail. Harrison Ford is the leading man. Walter Edwards was the director, and it is a Paramount Arcraft picture.

"THE WORLD AND HIS WIFE" A Rhymed Review (By Russell Holman)

When Feodora married
The rich man of Seville,
The tongues of envy carried
The news. (They're never still!)
"That young Ernesto's coming
To live with them, folks say,"
So gossip's voice was humming
Upon her wedding day.
"Her husband's so much older
Than she; and youth calls youth."
Then rumor, growing bolder,
Strayed off the paths of truth.
And people stooped to pander
To lies from hearts unclean.
Could love survive the slander?
The answer's on the screen.
