BAND TO PLAY AT RUTHERFORDTON

The Spindale Band has been engaged to play at the court house Wednesday evening at 8 p. m. Governor Morrison will address the people on the port terminal and water transportation act at this time.

WILLIS—MIDGETTE

Many of the Spindale people will be pleased to learn of the marriage of Miss Lucetta Midgette to Mr. Francis M. Willis, of Spartanburg. The wedding took place in Charlotte a few days ago. Miss Midgette's home is in Manteo, Dare county. She was teacher of English in the Spindale High School during the 1922-23 term, and is well known in this section. Miss Midgette was popular with the young people of Spindale, and liked very much by all. She was sponsor of many of the activities of the Senior class and of high school.

PRESBYTERIAN REVIVAL

Rev. G. R. Gillespie, of Gastonia, began a revival meeting at the new Presbyterian church Sunday evening. The services will be held each evening at 7:30 thru out this week. A large number of people have been attending the services from Spindale and Rutherfordton. Rev. Gillespie is Scout Commissioner of the Piedmont Council, Boy Scouts of America.

SCHOOL NEWS

On Friday afternoon the high school literary society met and perfected their organization. The society was named, flower, colors and motto selected. The members voted to retain the old society name of 1922-23, The Elmore Literary Society. Old rose and grey, the Senior class colors of 1922-23, were taken as colors and rose carnation accepted as society flower. "To be rather than to be seen" was chosen as their rather unique, but appropriate motto.

The society is already doing some splendid work. The officers for this term of office, elected a few weeks ago, are president, Ora Crenshaw; vice president, Pink Nanney; secretary-treasurer, Ruth Ellis; chaplain, Mack Hill; program committee, Una Setzer, George Grayson and Grace Ellington.

Captain Smith, who has been absent for several days on account of a severe cold, is now able to teach. The money which resulted from the party given by the high school girls is not enough to buy a basketball. The girls are planning to make and sell candy in order to finish out the needed amount for a ball.

Miss Mabel Saunders, a graduate of Winthrop College, reported Monday morning to begin her work here as teacher of the sixth grade. Miss Margaret Tate will teach sections of the second and fourth grades.

The North Carolina Department of Education awarded to Prof. B. B. L. Smith a superintendent's life certificate last week. This is quite a distinction for Prof. Smith and one that is given to only a few.

The new addition to the school building is rapidly nearing completion and Mr. Smith reports that they expect to occupy it by next week.

LOCALS

Rev. O. L. Simpson, who has been attending the Annual Conference in Greensboro, filled the pulpit of the First Methodist Church in Winston-Salem Sunday morning and delivered an able sermon. This church is one of the largest in the Western North Carolina Conference.

Mrs. S. E. Elmore, who has been at the bedside of her sister, Mrs. Bucoats, of Charleston, S. C., has returned home.

Mr. J. C. Cowan, Jr., of Rutherfordton, a member of the Spindale office force, is able to be out again after more than four months illness.

Messrs. Ivy and Carl Cowan, Ralph Morris and Fred Kinzie spent Friday and Saturday at Bridgewater, on an outing.

The small two years old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Carver is seriously ill.

Mr. J. H. Burwell, insurance agent and a familiar figure in Spindale, is now located in Forest City. He moved Monday morning and will be in business with Mr. J. A. Wilkie.

ATHLETICS IN SCHOOLS

There was no such thing as organized athletics in the United States or England before the middle of the last century. The first contest between Oxford and Cambridge was held in 1864. For a long period the keen desire of every normal boy has been to excel in athletics, to run faster, to jump higher, or play games with more skill and vigor than his companions. The time spent in athletics was often regarded as time lost, but the spirit of the young finally conquered the old-fashioned ideas. Today men realize that athletics form just as essential a part of man's education as books.

The school or college athlete usually learns that playing the game means more than just winning. It means representing your class or your school in every way. It means being a good student as well as a good athlete. In fact, the very best athletes are boys and men who have developed their brain power.

When you go into a game with a healthy desire to win it gives zest to the game. You can, however, carry this spirit too far. It may result in forgetting the true spirit of fair play, and it may lead to exercise strenuous enough to injure your health.

In the last few years girls and women have begun to take an interest in athletics. Today women play almost all of men's games. Examinations, as a result, show improved physical conditions.

Athletic games help the students to build up their minds, help them to have healthy bodies, and help them to take defeat as well as winning, for you can not expect to succeed every time, and help them to show a true spirit of fair play.

Many of the great lessons of life come from the games we play in youth. The great healthful games are those that are played out of doors. As the philosophy of James says, "Seek first the kingdom of out-of-doors, and you will find health and pleasure there". One of the first rules of James is to lay the foundation of a full and splendid manhood, and we should keep this, as one of the mottoes of our school life.

We should play a game for its own sake, and not spoil the spirit of a true game, or lowering the honor of true manhood, by playing it for money. If a game is not interesting itself we should leave it alone. We would break the great rule of "Fair play" by playing for a baser motive than the pure love of the game. Play the game for the game, and for nothing but the game.

Our own games are our own lessons in noble things. No American boy can be healthy and whole and yet miss the laws of honor. The laws of honor should ring in every school, should be blazoned as in letters of fire over every playground. They are among the oldest things in the world, they will last as long as the human race stands. In the olden days when men's sense of honor was twisted, so that only a duel could satisfy it, a man would not take a mean advantage of his enemy he was about to kill. He would measure sword with him to see that he had as good a chance as he, and the fight was fair.

We must think of the game and not of ourselves. The game is lost if one member of the team seeks his own glory. The unity of all for a single cause, each player playing his or her own part, is a condition without which no game is won. All the players go into the game with zeal, and surrender themselves to obedience to the law that holds the team together. These laws will finally become natural in every game we play. We should be loyal and true so that our comrades will be able to rely on us.

We should be good losers, we should yield with grace and cheerfulness to a victory or defeat, leave quarreling to meaner souls, and not spoil the game by claiming doubtful points or insisting on little rights. We should be willing to lose a hundred games than win one by unfair playing. When the time comes, as it comes in all games when nobody could see if your play were unfair, you will be glad to know that your loyalty is above suspicion.

Dawsey (looking at report card) "Oh, mother, I got meritorious commendation at school this week." Mother: "Ain't it strange the number of awful diseases that's ketched by children at school now days?"

MY MODEL STORY

Sir Phillip Sidney, a brave English knight, was fighting in the Netherlands, helping the Dutch in their struggle for liberty against the tyrant, Phillip of Spain.

In a fierce battle he was struck by a musket ball, which broke his thigh-bone. Thirsty and faint from the loss of blood, he called for water. He had just raised the cup to his lips, when his eye fell upon a poor dying soldier who looked longingly at the cool drink.

Without so much as tasting it, Sir Phillip handed the cup to the poor fellow with these words: "Thy need is greater than mine."
