INDIANS IN PURITAN DAYS AND NOW.
 Four white men are accused of forming a murder ring, that already has to its credit the deaths of twenty Osage Indians. Oil had made them rich, and in 1925, as in old Puritan days, it seemed to Christian white men wrong for Indians to have property. They killed them then, and they kill them now. But now it is illegal, and the Grand Jury will see about them. Wiser white men don't murder Indians. They wait until the Indians get the money, then go to them with bootleg whiskey, leave the whiskey behind and come back with the money.

quickly solved by a young man from Pittsburg. Now, Thaw's wife, for whom White was killed, drinks eight ounces of a poisonous mixture to kill herself. Clergymen will find in this a good text for a sermon that will not put the congregation to sleep. Some "radical" clergyman might even engage Evelyn Thaw to appear in his church as a living text or "sad example" if she survives. Henry Ward Beecher, in the Brooklyn pulpit, sold a mulatto girl at auction in old slavery days to emphasize a sermon against slavery.

JAKE F. ALEXANDER
 When Rutherford County began to recover from the effects of the Civil War and the period of reconstruction in the eighteen hundred and late eighties and early nineties, there are certain individuals who occupy a place of pre-eminence in her business life. Among these are the late S. B. Tanner, R. R. Haynes, Dr. Geo. F. Young and J. F. Alexander and Dr. T. B. Lovelace, now of Macon, Ga. All of these, with the exception of Dr. Lovelace, have "crossed the river and now sleep beneath the shade of the trees." These men were real builders in their day and time, and the future historian of Rutherford county cannot write of its wonderful progress without having first in his mind's eye this group of great men.

There is not a man in Rutherford county who knew the mentality and fine traits of character possessed by J. F. Alexander, when he heard of his death, did not stop and think what a "giant oak in a mighty forest has fallen." His benefactions to Round Hill Academy, Mars Hill and Boiling Springs, all exemplify the noble and generous impulses of the man. Without any ostentatious spirit and unknown, except probably to his closest friends and family, he educated out of his own funds a number of ministers who are now spending their lives serving others. His life was one of unselfish devotion to his family, his friends and his community.—Rutherford Sun.

RUTHERFORD SUN'S NEW MANAGEMENT.
 The first issue of The Rutherford Sun under new management came out Thursday of last week, and was a most creditable issue, considering the handicaps of an after Christmas rush, the lack of adjustment to the new affairs under which the management had to work, the breaking in of new men and other hindrances. Once fairly underway, the Sun gives promise of becoming one of the state's foremost county papers. Messrs. Wilson and Norris are to be congratulated.
 Under the caption, "Why the Sun is Under New Management," the editors say:

 "There has been some misunderstanding as to the new interest in The Sun. The public is entitled to the facts which we are giving here. Last June, it came to the attention of the officials of Chimney Rock Mountains, Inc., that a person far removed from North Carolina was trading for a substantial interest in The Sun Printing Company. Feeling that it was to the best interests of Rutherford County to keep the ownership here, Chimney Rock Mountains, Inc., purchased and still owns the interest then about to be sold. The present management has no ambition other than to give the people of Rutherford County a modern county newspaper such as the development and progress of the county merits. As heretofore, politically, the paper will be independent. It will be the aim and policy to stand for clean morals and sound business, and to publish 'All the news that is fit to print.' We believe we are coming into a period of progress and prosperity, such as we have never dreamed of."

Overland Six Sets Two Records In Australia
Touring Car Averages 51 1-2 Miles an Hour in 24-Hour Non-Stop Grind.

In the greatest series of motor tests ever held in Australia, the Overland Six tore off 1,235 miles in lished two speed and endurance records which have set Australian people agog over the engine of this car.
 In a 24-hour non-stop speed run on an Australian Speedway, this Overland Six tore off 1235 miles in the 24 hours, averaging 51 1-2 miles per hour—a new speedway record for cars of this type.
 In another remarkable test which graphically illustrates the roadability of the Overland Six, a touring car made the run from Sidney to Burke and return, a distance of 1,025 miles, in 27 hours and 57 minutes. This run established a new speed record for the Australian country roads over this course, when the Overland Six averaged 40 miles per hour on the test.

Both records were officially supervised and are considered emphatic proof of the reliability of the Willys-Overland engine to perform at high speed under all circumstances.
 In addition, several new runs were established by Willys-Knight cars within the past three months that indicate the reliability of this car in Australia. R. Corden, Engineering Director of the Overland-Sidney, Ltd., reports to the factory that the remarkable performance of the Overland Six in these two speed records and the performance of the Willys-Knight indicate the reliability of these cars to perform under the most unusual circumstances, inasmuch as these two tests were conducted under decidedly different circumstances.
 Willys-Overland has enjoyed a sales popularity in Australia exceeding all previous records in this respect.
