LAKE LURE GREATLY IMPRESSES NOTED LECTURER

Writes of Beauties of Resort and Pays Tribute to Dr. Morse

(By Anna D. Olesen, of Minnesota, noted lecturer and world traveler, holding a prominent place in "Who's Who in America," and first woman candidate for United States Senate, called by political leaders "The Lady Astor of America.")

It has been my good fortune to see many of the world's famous resorts built up for the pleasure and recreation of care-worn humans. Hidden away in the Blue Ridge mountains of North Carolina is a resort to delight the souls of beauty lovers. One reaches this resort over perfectly constructed concrete roads which wind their way upward to the mountains. Lake Lure is the name of the resort to which Uncle Sam brings the mail. Chimney Rock looks down from its proud and lofty elevation to beautiful Lake Lure which sparkles and scintillates in the sunlight and seems to throw kisses at the lofty and almost inaccessible rock. One has mountain air and scenery and lake sports combined in this place. Streams of crystal purity tumble over rocks hastening to join the lake. Here one may see the three famous Bottomless Pools, and hear the mighty war of waters tumbling down to mingle with the waters of Lake Lure.

Hotels well appointed with all modern conveniences welcome the tourist and within walking distance he may see the mountain people living as their ancestors have lived for generations.

One is renewed in body and spirit in the atmosphere of the mountain air, perfumed with the odor of pine trees and flowers.

But to appreciate Lake Lure and Chimney Rock thoroughly, the tourist must see and converse with Dr. Morse, who over twenty years ago came to dwell in the shadow of Chimney Rock. As mountains tower over valleys, some human souls seem to rise to heights which the rest of us can not attain. We can only sense that we gaze into the eyes of one who is of the world's great leaders. Such a man is Dr. Morse, the one who first visualized Chimney Rock and its environs as a great resort. Of the Morse family, one of whose members pioneered in putting the telegraph and cable at man's disposal, the good doctor shows in his every expression that he comes of ancestry destined to lead into great new fields of endeavor. I went to Chimney Rock, exclaimed over its rugged and majestic beauty, thrilled over the exquisite beauty of Lake Lure, and shall remember it always.

But much as we love nature, as human being we are proud of what is human—we like to be reminded once in a while of our human greatness (we have so many evidences of our human weakness.) And in Dr. Morse we have a man whose presence reminds us of man's high destiny. Emerson has written an essay on the "Uses of Great Men." Well that is one of the uses of great men to remind us of our high destiny. Now that Chimney Rock resort has been made accessible to the world, by the law of attraction there should flock thither leaders in many lines of human endeavor. Because, like attracts like, and Dr. Morse will draw around himself really great souls. And Chimney Rock will become one of the happy, cultural centers of our country, the region will attract beauty lovers, and the noble and great intellect of Dr. Morse will attract the great minds of this era in our country.

Lecturing from day to day, giving of myself to audiences I oft-times become weary. I went to Chimney Rock, refreshed my soul by the beauties of the region and strengthened

THE FOREST CITY DRAMATIC CLUB WINS $50.00 PRIZE

Club Secures Largest Audience in Proportion to Size of Town For Carolina Playmakers

The Forest City Dramatic Club received the prize of $50 offered by the Carolina Playmakers to the town which gave them the best paying audience in proportion to the population on their tour this year. Gastonia ran Forest City a close second. They had a much larger audience there, but the population is so much greater than that of Forest City. The Dramatic club is to be congratulated on receiving this prize for the Playmakers played to good audiences in seventeen North Carolina cities, including Charlotte, Raleigh, Asheville and Greensboro. The work of the committee on advertising in the Forest City club was exceptionally good.

One of the worst combinations we know of is a high powered car with a low powered brain above the steering wheel.

my intellect in conversation with Dr. Morse and renewed my faith in the high destiny of mankind as I caught a glimpse of his matchless spirit. My hope is that thousands of others may know the "Rock" and the man, and be exalted and helped as I have been.
