

GROW SPRING LAMBS ADVICE OF EXPERT

CONDITIONS IN SOUTH OFFER ADVANTAGES.

ATLANTA, GA.—Convinced that Southern farmers could increase their income by growing spring lambs for market, the Southern Railway System, through its Agricultural Department, offers the following suggestions as to the care of ewes and lambs by G. W. Humphrey, one of its agricultural agents, who is an expert on sheep culture:

During the lambing season the ewes should be kept close at hand where they can be seen several times a day and at least once before retiring for the night. By this means many a new born lamb is saved which otherwise may become chilled and die before it is strong enough to suckle its mother. By carefully handling the flock one can pick out those ewes which would probably lamb first and these it would be well to put in a shed or barn, particularly if the weather is bad. Sheep will stand a dry cold better than rain.

A few small pens in the barn or shed are very helpful, because in them can be placed the ewes which have lambs that seem rather weak and if kept there, say for a couple of days, the little fellows will gain strength and get a good start.

A little common sense will save many a new born lamb which has become chilled. Simply hold a warm water for a few minutes, then wrap it in a piece of blanket or woolen cloth and give it a little warm cow's milk from a bottle, using any ordinary baby's nursing nipple. As soon as it is strong enough put it in a pen with its mother and see that it suckles. Such care as mentioned above means dollars later on.

Again the value of seeing the ewes often is in that at times they need assistance at lambing. When such is the case handle the ewe carefully, laying her gently on her side and give the necessary attention. At times when the lamb is born it will have a film of phlegm over the mouth and nostrils. While this does not often happen, should such be the case, see that it is quickly removed and pet the lamb gently over the heart to start it breathing.

For the first few days after the lambs are born give the ewes good legume hay and then turn ewes and lambs on green crops such as oats, wheat, rye or barley or any other green grazing crop.

Don't forget the "creeps" whereby lambs may eat a little grain at will as soon as they are old enough. Dock and castrate lambs at about two weeks of age or even earlier.

Whether your lambs sell as "tops," "seconds" or "culs" will depend very largely upon the care and feed you give the ewes and lambs between the time the lambs are born and shipped to market. The ewes must have sufficient feed to produce enough milk for the growing lamb. Unless you have sufficient legume hay and grazing the ewes should have some grain as a supplement.

In marketing lambs the advantage of co-operative carlot shipments is important, as where spring lambs are offered in carlots the larger and better markets may be reached. Farmers with fewer than carload lots are by co-operation enabled to avail themselves of all the advantages of sales in carload lots. Discuss the matter with your neighbors and with your county agent and get his help in formulating marketing plans.
