FOREST CITY

Ah, dear Forest City! bright queen of the hills,
In heart I salute thee; the present and past.

The charm of thy people, thy mountains and rills,
Can ne'er be forgotten while memories last,

O'er miles in the south, your fair woodlands, your streams,
From my alma mater I saw in my dreams.

I've wandered afar in the dangers of life,
And oft heard the sound of eternity's call;

Yet in the grim contest; its death noise and strife,
I still dreamed of Piedmont, regardless of all.

But, after these long years, my dreams, they came true,
In sure gravitation I came back to you.

Six years I was with you, in love, joy and tears,
Your fathers and mothers were one with my own.

The picture has vanished; they passed with the years,
And only a few now remain that I've known.

But you—sons and daughters—dear hearts, every one,
Remind me today of your dear parents gone.
