COLLEEN MOORE AT THE MOVIE WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 12

In "Oh Kay!", the new First National picture, the screen's leading feminine box-office attraction—according to a recent nation wide poll of theatre owners—and filmdom's youngest director, are brought together.

The star is Colleen Moore and the director is Mervyn LeRoy.

"Oh Kay!" was scenarized by Carey Wilson from the famous musical comedy success by Guy Bolton, P. G. Wodehouse, George Gershwin and Ira Gershwin.

In "Oh Kay!", Miss Moore is said to have one of the finest comedy roles of her film career. It is in striking contrast to the star's two recent big successes, the First National special, "Lilac Time," directed by George Fitzmaurice and "Happiness Ahead," written for her by Edmund Goulding.

Mervyn LeRoy has made a record for successful direction after three years as a comedy constructor for Miss Moore's films. He first handled the megaphone on "Flying Romeos," featuring George Sidney and Charlie Murray, and then on "Harold Teen," from the newspaper comic strip of world-wide fame.

John McCormick produced "Oh Kay!" for First National Pictures. Lawrence Gray is Miss Moore's leading man. Others in the support are Alan Hale, Ford Sterling, Claude Gillingwater, Julianne Johnston, Edgar Norton and many others.

"Oh Kay!" will be the attraction at the Movie Theatre, Wednesday evening, September 12.
