HORN'S THEATRE

PROGRAM, NOV. 14 TO 21

WEDNESDAY, NOV. 14

"MARRIAGE BY CONTRACT."

Comedy—"Who's Lyn?"
You can not afford to miss "Marriage By Contract."

Robert Edeson inherited his love of the theatre from his father, who was both actor and stage manager and who never had the slightest doubt that his son would continue in his chosen profession. Born in New Orleans, New York nevertheless spelled home to him until about six years ago, when he definitely cast his lot with pictures and joined the Hollywood colony.

His first connection with the theatre was as treasurer of the old Park Theatre in Brooklyn. The sudden illness of the leading man, and a friend's jocular bet that "Bob" couldn't take the actor's place successfully, led to his stepping into the role at very short notice. Not only did Edeson collect the $100 from his betting friend, but he got so much applause that he never went back to the box office.

Starred in both London and New York productions, Edeson continued for thirty years to spend most of his time in the theatre, with only occasional appearances in pictures, until he agreed to play the role of Dextery in "The Spoilers". The longing of the seasoned stage troupier for a permanent home at last induced him to migrate to Hollywood and settle down to regular film work, becoming one of the most successful free lance players in the movies.

He will be seen at Horn's Theatre, Wednesday, November 14., in support of Patsy Ruth Miller in "Marriage by Contract" the John M. Stahl special production written by Edward Clark for Tiffany-Stahl. Companionate marriage is the modern theme of this story.

THURSDAY, NOV. 15.

Ken Maynard in "GLORIOUS TRAIL."
Comedy—"Show Off."
"Glorious Trail"—There are all classes and kinds of motion pictures

as well as motion picture audiences. Some like one thing and some another, but one type that seems to strike a universal appeal is the western feature and among the aces of western films are the Ken Maynard's productions.

Ken in "The Glorious Trail" his latest action special at Horn's Theatre, Nov. 15, a picture packed with speed, pep and action. It contains romance, historical fact closely interwoven with riding stunts.

"The Glorious Trail" is an original story by Marion Jackson and tells of the stringing of the first telegraph wires that connected the East with the West. It is a powerful theme and shown graphically the terrific hardships and privations encountered by these brave men in accomplishing this gigantic feat.

Albert Rogell, the director, has shown all of this in a well constructed and smooth-running story. Ken as the young engineer in charge of operations out-stunts and out-fights any role he has yet portrayed.

Gladys McConnell has the leading feminine role, while others in the cast are Frank Hagney, Les Bates, James Bradbury, Jr., Billy Franey and Chief Yowlache.

FRIDAY, NOV. 16.

Ted Wells in "STRAIGHT SHOOTER."

Comedy—"Empty Socks."
Blake of Scotland Yard, No. 5.

SATURDAY, NOV. 17

Carl Dune and Geo. K. Arthur in "BROTHERLY LOVE."

Comedy—"Listen, Children."

MONDAY, NOV. 19.

"FORBIDDEN HOURS."
Comedy—"Alice's Auto Race."
News-Laff.

TUESDAY, NOV. 20

"DEAD MAN'S CURVE."
Comedy—"Mickey's Little Eve."
"DEAD MAN'S CURVE"

A SATISFYING THRILL
If one likes auto racing and does not race the next best thing is to direct a picture based on this theme, according to Richard Rosson, director of Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., in "Dead Man's Curve," the thrilling drama of the track, showing at Horn's Theatre Tuesday, November 20.

Rosson loves the roar of the powerful motors and the sweeping clouds of dust that add glamor to an automobile race, but the fates decreed that he should be a director rather than a driver. Owning a powerful car himself, his favorite sport is driving, only not in races.

As a consequence of this, Rosson has for long desired to direct a racing picture, feeling that with his interest he could put real feeling and life into such a production. When FBO decided to make "Dead Man's Curve" from Frank Richardson Pierce's "The Century Championship," Rosson got his chance. He says that the thrill of making a racing story is as great as actually driving in a race.

WEDNESDAY, NOV. 21

"FLOATING COLLEGE."
Comedy—"Leaping Luck."
"Floating College" is great. Don't miss it. Synopsis as follows:

Oscar, guard at the collegiate prison at Newberry, engages in an altercation with Jerry, manager of a ladies' barber shop.

Jerry, in running away from Oscar's wrath, is arrested as a fugitive and is sent to Newberry penitentiary where Oscar seizes upon the rare opportunity for vengeance. In the jail Jerry recognizes Dorothy, the "reform" warden's daughter, as a girl he once befriended. He also discovers that Oscar is greatly in love with the girl.

Oscar, seeking to make little Jerry suffer, puts him on the prison football team. Through a freak play, Jerry becomes the hero of the rah-rah prison. To prevent Jerry from playing in the big game against a rival prison, Oscar has Jerry pardoned.

In the meanwhile Oscar himself has run afoul of the law during his day off and is sent to jail in the rival prison. He is put on the football team there and is in the lineup of his rival team when they play his "home" boys.

Jerry, distracted by his release from prison, tries in vain to commit new felonies that would send him back. The law, however, worked too slowly and he even attempts to break into jail. He finally gets back but realizes that Oscar, on the rival team knows all the Newberry football signals. Jerry then escapes from jail, steals the rival football signals and gets back in time to save the day for Newberry.

He scores a thrilling touchdown—with Oscar's last-minute aid—wins Dorothy and presumably lives happy ever after within the walls of "dear old Newberry."

WAYSIDE GANG MEETS AT CLIFFSIDE

A most happy occasion was the banquet and program at Cliffside Tuesday night given by the Rutherford County Wayside Gang. Plates for more than fifty guests were provided by the members of Mrs. H. L. Robertson's economic class, assisted by the ladies of the "gang", and served by members of the class, all dressed in white and who presented a beautiful picture as they so politely and efficiently served the guests:

Harold Brown and Harry Lee Grant, of Charlotte, were present, and the guest of honor was Miss Pantha Smart, beloved shut-in. B. E. Roach was master of ceremonies.

After invocation by B. E. Gold, a splendid supper was served, after which the guests all repaired to the Cliffside Hall, where a splendid program was given.

After a few introductory remarks by Mr. Roach, a splendid recitation was given by Jack Atkinson, who was roundly applauded and responded with a second reading. Lewis Davidson then gave a reading and also was heartily encored. Virginia and Howard Magness then sang several songs, which were warmly applauded.

Miss Pantha Smart then gave a talk in which she told of her struggles as a shut-in and of the inspiration and help she had received from the Waysiders.

Mr. Brown then made a stirring talk, in which he told of his experiences and of the work and aims of Wayside. Mr. Grant gave a short talk on the Wayside work and also gave a reading of one of his poems.

The Courier is sorry that on account of the rush of going to press today, the writer can not give more of the details of this splendid meeting. It is a great work the Wayside are doing and it was a great meeting.
