A GOOD INVESTMENT

Willimatic, St., December 12.—A three-dollar investment twenty years ago will now net John W. Kilpatrick a small fortune. Twenty years ago he was selling fire extinguishers. In making a sale in Brooklyn, Ct., he accepted a violin in exchange for an extinguisher which was worth about $3. Experts now advise Kilpatrick his violin is a Stradivarius dated 1716.

EXTENTION CONFERENCE BEGINS THIS WEEK

Raleigh, N. C., Dec. 10.—County men and women agents of North Carolina will return to school this week when they journey from their home stations to State College for the purpose of attending the annual extension conference beginning on Dec. 13 and lasting through December 20.

It will be a week of hard work. The agents will hear new facts about farming and home life; will report on the accomplishments of the past year and will make their plans for the coming year. The conference will be attended by the specialists, the college teachers and the administrative officers. New methods will be studied, results will be checked and some few speeches will be heard.

On the whole, however, it will be a working conference, says Dean I. O. Schaub. A number of important committees have been appointed to study various matters and these will report during the week. However, some time will be allowed for pleasure. Each evening there will be social gatherings with a program arranged by the social committee. The agents plan to meet one another and to enjoy their association out of business hours. There will be several alumni dinners, one or two banquets and a Christmas tree party.

The 25th anniversary of the founding of extension work by Dr. Seaman A. Knapp will be fittingly observed with a program on Friday evening, Dec. 14. Hon. Josephus Daniels, publisher of the News and Observer, will award the cup offered to the agent conducting the best news service during the year at a joint session on December 15.

Dean Schaub, Mrs. McKimmon and Mr. Gray plan to have most of the important work completed by Monday afternoon, December 17, so that the agents may take part in the annual meeting of the Southern Livestock Association which is to be held December 18, 19 and 20.

LOCAL MARINE SPENDS CHRISTMAS IN TROPICS

With the prospect of spending Christmas and several months thereafter in the tropics, Paul Doggett, of Forest City, N. C., left Hampton Roads, Va., recently on the U. S. S. Kittery with a group of U. S. Marines bound for Port au Prince, the capital of Haiti.

For years small detachments of U. S. Marines have been on duty in the West Indian republic, where they are assisting the local authorities in preserving the stability of government. Peaceful conditions prevail throughout the country, and only a small number of the sea soldiers are on duty there. They usually remain abroad for a year or longer.

Paul, who was born in Rutherford County, at Caroleen, formerly made his home with his father, Birch B. Doggett, of Forest City.

The Marines in Haiti always observe Christmas with the same spirit in which it is observed at more northern stations of the Marine Corps. Many of them prefer service in the tropics, and they frequently volunteer for duty in Haiti, the Virgin Islands, and other locations in the Caribbean.

SIMP TANNER'S IDEA

Stanly Mitchell, chairman of the Bank of the United States, talking before the Pan-American Commercial Congress in New York, suggested establishment of branch banks in Latin America, "similar to those operated by the British" in fostering trade development. The files of The Observer back in 1908, will show that exactly the same thing was advocated by S. B. Tanner, progressive textile manufacturer of Spindale, Caroleen, Henrietta and Charlotte, as the first requisite in securing South American trade for the South's cotton mills. If the United States had been provided with banking facilities in that country like those established by the British and the Germans, we would have been securing a large share of that trade years ago. Banker Mitchell is proposing no new plan. It was seen as the practical thing by a North Carolina manufacturer years ago, and we must come to it, if we are to get any appreciable amount of South American trade.—Charlotte Observer.

VACCINATES POULTRY AGAINST WINTER DISEASES

Ellenboro, Dec. 10.—The students of agriculture at Ellenboro vaccinated a flock of 100 hens last week for Mr. John O. Wright, who lives in town, against common winter diseases such as roup, colds, and diphtheria. The work was done under the supervision of the teacher while on a field trip from the school to learn how to do this job. Three doses of the vaccine at intervals of three days were given each hen.
