PLAN TELEPHONE
CABLE SPANNING
THE ATLANTIC

Use of New Type, Discovered by Bell Scientists, Solves Baffling Problem

Another dream of telephone engineers has been made possible of achievement, namely that of telephoning across the Atlantic by deep-sea cable. Until recently, no one has known how to make a submarine cable that could carry speech over so long a distance and which could be laid in the great depth of the ocean. The longest deep-sea telephone cables which have yet been laid are the Key West-Havana cables, which are only a little more than one hundred miles in length.

Telephoning great distances over land cables made possible by the use of telephone repeaters, or amplifiers, which, placed at intervals of about fifty miles along the cable, serve to renew the strength of telephone currents. Obviously, it is out of the question to place sufficient vacuum tube amplifiers in a deep-sea ocean cable.

Up to a few years ago, telephoning across the Atlantic by cable was practically impossible with a structure of cable which could be laid and repaired in deep waters, but through the development of new materials in the Bell Telephone Laboratories, telephone engineers now have the means to accomplish this long desired end. One of the important steps toward this achievement was the discovery, a few years ago, in the laboratories, of a permalloy, an alloy of extraordinary magnetic properties, which has been used with much success for loading coils on land telephone lines and which has been used in the latest telegraph cables, as a wrapping of wire or tape around the conductor, serving a purpose similar to that of the loading coils used on land lines. In the meantime, the Bell Laboratories engineers have been actively engaged in searching out new alloys and in developing means for using them. Their latest accomplishment is the design of a cable suitable for transatlantic telephony, and which not only will permit of telephoning across the Atlantic, but when not in use for such conversations, can serve for telegraph operation.

That such an announcement can be made by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company before the cable has been manufactured, laid and tested, is particularly interesting, but the experiments that have been made have proved conclusively that such a cable is feasible. Similarly, some fourteen years ago, before the first transcontinental telephone line had been completed in 1915, telephone engineers knew in advance that their efforts would be successful and were able to make such an announcement although an actual conversation across the continent had not at that time taken place.

Wasn't Jimmy good to risk it?"

One Sunday morn, the pastor noticed a new member at church. He went over to talk with the newcomer.
"Well, well, I'm mighty glad to see you, Rufus. Guess you-all haven't been to church in a good while."

"I had to come. I need strength." answered Rufus. "You see, it's this way. Ise got a job whitewashin' a chicken coop and weedin' a watermelon patch."

"That's the chap who bought the Daily News."

"Really! How much did he give for it?"

"Two cents."
