ORDINATION SERVICE.

Rev. W. C. Lovin, of West Asheville, recently elected president of the North Carolina Conference of the Wesleyan Methodist church, will be at the local church Thursday and Friday evening, October 31st, and November 1st, to preside at the first quarterly conference of the Forest City charge.

At one of the services an unusual event will take place when the pastor, Rev. Henry Bazel Hiatt, will receive elders orders. Usually the ordination of elders takes place at the annual conference session, but since Rev. Mr. Hiatt was unable to attend the last annual session of the conference the local church and pastor are favored with this extraordinary quarterly conference.

A number of ministers of the conference of nearby church, are expected to be present and participate in the ordination service. Rev. Mr. Hiatt is a promising young minister whose friends are delighted with the marked progress he is making. He received his education at the Wesleyan Methodist College of Central, S. C., and God's Bible School of Cincinnati, Ohio.

A more definite announcement will probably appear in next week's Courier regarding the ordination service. Watch for it.

A FINE GIRL.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Hardin, Monday evening, October 22nd, a fine girl.

WAYS AND MEANS.

No matter what the shortcomings, scolding or perpetual nagging never cured it. A word of encouragement, rightly placed, is worth a load of impatient adjuration.

I know a man who is generally regarded as a financial failure. As such, he is passed by, as not worth the attention of the busy world. He therefore becomes despondent at times; if he does a good deed, people seem to think he has not done all he should. They regard him as a good-natured guy, who could have been wealthy if he had just had any sense.

In reality, this fellow has lent a hand every time he found a brother in need—a hand, for that was all he had. He gives his mite cheerfully to charity, church and state. Peddlers regard him as "easy money", if he happens to increase his income a little; they swarm about him like mosquitoes.

His wife nags him, because he doesn't make good like other husbands do for their wives. His life of service to others is anything but a happy one. If every man was a honest as Joe, this would be a better world.

Once he confided to me. "I've tried to be a good man, and, above everything else, to wrong nobody; I've done my best, but it don't seem to make me any friends."

"Joe", I replied, "you haven't any enemies; everybody like you,—I'm sure of that."

"But, doctor," he came back, "they never tell me so. If somebody'd just . . ."

He drew out a faded handkerchief turned away for a moment and repeated, "if they'd just give a word, now and then. . ."

I saw myself as in a mirror; I had never found time to lighten Joe's burden—to give him what his hungry heart was crying for. And, it would have cost me absolutely nothing!

Joe is a better man than I am. I felt like a culprit under an unintentional rebuke.—Dr. John Joseph Gaines.
