GIVES MONEY VALUE OF JAPAN CLOVER

A crop of lespedeza turned under is worth $18 an acre as a fertilizer or corn. This is the value of the crop as determined by a demonstration conducted by Andrew Jeffries of Mebane in Alamance county.

"This crop of lespedeza was planted on wheat in the early spring of 1927," says Enos C. Blair, extension agronomist at State College. "The soil was typical, sandy, tobacco land. The lespedeza was left on the soil until the fall of 1928 when it was plowed under. However, in 1927 and 1928, tobacco fertilized with manure and 1000 pounds an acre of an 8-3-5 mixture was grown on the land next to the lespedeza. The soil was exactly similar and not even a inch or turn row separated the two crops. In 1929, corn was planted after both the lespedeza and the tobacco and fertilized with 200 pounds an acre of a 9-2-3 mixture. After the lespedeza, the corn made 43.4 bushels of grain an acre and after tobacco, made 25.3 bushels an acre. The increase of 18.1 bushels valued at one dollar a bushel was due entirely to the crop of lespedeza turned under."

Mr. Blair says that some may argue that the land might have been profitably used in producing high priced tobacco instead of the lespedeza; but, the fact remains that those counties which go heavily into tobacco production are the ones from which the cry of "hard times" is heard. On the other hand, those counties planting comparatively large percentages of cultivated lands to legumes to build up their soils are solidly prosperous.

Even though the agriculture of the diversified counties is less spectacular than that of some of the money crop counties, these diversified sections have a stable and profitable agriculture that is furnishing a good living without the great valleys of despair and the few peaks of prosperity, says Mr. Blair.

Nothing so unusual about a lie detector, as used in a recent murder case. Many a local citizen can tell he has been married to one for some twenty or thirty years.

Some rare old coins were recently found on a golf course. A friend rises to remark that antiques may be dug up on our own course here most any time.

It is said that the price of a new piano with two sets of keys and chimes and various other attachments is prohibitive. Let's hope it stays that way.

HOLD STATE CONFERENCE OF EXTENSION WORKERS

County agents, home agents, extension specialists and members of the school of agriculture at State College will hold their annual conference at State College during the week of January 6 to 11 at the call of Director I. O. Schaub.

In addition to making plans for the coming year, reviewing the activities of 1929 and learning of new developments in the field of agricultural research, the extension organization will devote much of its time to developing plans for the live-at-home campaign and the long time program of agricultural development. During three days of the week, on January 7, 8 and 9, the farm agents will meet with the Southern Livestock Association which holds its 17th annual meeting at State College this year. Some of the more notable livestock folks of the South will discuss important livestock questions on the program of this association and the extension specialists and others will have the opportunity of hearing these authorities.

The county agent news contest will also be conducted during the week. It is expected that 50 or more arm and home agents will bring exhibits of their press material to the conference. The Charlotte Observer of Charlotte has donated a beautiful silver trophy cup for the agent who has done the most effective work in presenting the agriculture of his county to the people.

A banquet on Tuesday evening given under the auspices of the Epsilon Sigma Phi fraternity and with Dr. Bradford Knapp, President of Alabama Polytechnic Institute, as the speaker will be one of the main social events. Every extension worker and his wife or her husband will attend this gathering. The livestock organization will also hold a banquet on Wednesday evening, January 8, when Governor Gardner and President Brooks will be the principal speakers.

DAIRY MEETING.

Forest City, R-2, Jan. 6.—Dairy-men will meet at Oakland Consolidated school Wednesday, January 8th at 7 p. m., to discuss the advisability of a pasteurizing plant for this section. Several interesting talks will be made.

The dairy meeting will follow a cotton meeting by Mr. M. L. Treadwell, who will discuss spacing cotton and its effect on yields. Every farmer and dairyman is invited to attend.
