Side Dishes Point Up Flavors

By ETIENNE ALLIO, Chef, Hotel New Yorker, New York City

SIDE dishes—the various slaws, a bit of fruit prepared in some unusual manner—point up the flavors of the dishes with which they are served, and go far toward giving the added zest of surprise and variety.

Deserving a far greater popularity than they now enjoy, it is hard to say why, except for the ordinary cole slaw, they so seldom appear upon the home table unless guests are present. They are inexpensive and easy to prepare, and there seems to be no good reason why they should not become regular items of the family menu.

Peach and Pineapple Curry—Fill the bottom of a casserole with a layer of sliced, canned pineapple. Dot with butter and sprinkle with two teaspoons brown sugar and one teaspoon curry powder. Add a layer of canned peaches and sprinkle with the same amounts of brown sugar and curry powder. Repeat the process until the dish is filled. On the top layer, which should consist of peaches, double the amount of sugar and curry. Bake for one-half hour in a moderate oven. For those who like more or less curry, the amount may be varied. Delicious with roast lamb.

Cheese Slaw—Let one pint of shredded cabbage stand in cold water until fresh and crisp. Dry and mix with five tablespoons grated cheese. Mix one tablespoon vinegar, one teaspoon mixed mustard, one teaspoon salt, one teaspoon brown sugar, one-fourth teaspoon paprika, few grains cayenne. Add three-fourths cup buttermilk, mixing thoroughly. Pour over the cabbage and cheese. Garnish with green pepper rings.

Banana Vinaigrette—Peel and slice lengthwise four or five large, firm bananas. Pack in shallow casserole. Mix together one tablespoon vinegar, one-half cup beef stock, one-fourth cup brown sugar. Pour over bananas. Dot with four large tablespoons butter and bake in hot oven for twenty minutes. Serve with roast beef.
