NO VACATION FOR THE AUGUST GARDEN

The home gardener who looks forward to a plentiful supply of fresh vegetables this fall and winter will take a vacation himself but will keep the garden at work.

E. B. Morrow, extension horticulturist at State college, says it may look hard to think of planting vegetables, seeds when the thermometer is hanging around in the nineties, yet there are many crops which may be planted during the second and third weeks of August that will mature before frost.

Among the stand-bys which he recommends are snap beans, beets, cabbage, carrots, cowpeas, corn, lettuce and turnips.

Snap beans may be planted every two or three weeks up until 60 days before the first killing frost. This means as late as September the first in the central part of the State. Young beets will stand a great deal of hot weather once they are up and growing. The crop prefers cool weather but will give a harvest if planted ten to 12 weeks before a killing frost.

Plants of the early maturing cabbage such as Copenhagen Market and Jersey Wakefield may be set as late as the second week of August with assurance of a crop. The crop should be forced with a nitrogen side-dresser as soon as the plants are established, recommends Mr. Morrow.

Carrots require the same conditions as beets and will stand some frost but not heavy freezes. Cowpeas of the Blackeye variety should be given a row or two in the fall garden for home use.

Early varieties of corn may also be planted in the eastern and central sections of the State with assurance of a crop before frost. Lettuce is worth trying as a fall crop, if there is some fertile soil available. No fall garden is complete without a good space to turnips, says Mr. Morrow.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to thank our friends, neighbors and relatives for their many acts of kindness and the sympathy shown us during the illness and death of our daughter and sister, Gladys Freeman. May God bless each of you.

CLIFFSIDE NEWS

Cliffside, Aug. 12.—(Special) Mr. Robert and Rev. James Jennings of Columbia, S. C., spent part of last week here with the former's parents.

On Friday Mr. Roberson and Rev. Jennings, with Misses Oattie Houser and Louise Lemmons motored to Eliada Camp Grounds, six miles west of Asheville. They arrived in time to attend part of the Bible period in the morning. After dinner they were shown over the seventy-five acres of grounds, which in the future is to be the home of one of the greatest Bible centers in the south. The grounds are owned by the Columbia Bible college. The entire party reports a happy day spent together with school mates and friends.

On Wednesday night of last week Misses Oattie and Hettie Houser and Mr. Robert Roberson and Rev. James Jennings were invited to the home of Miss Louise Lemmons where they enjoyed a watermelon slicing. Mr. Roberson and Rev. Jennings were school mates of Miss Lemmons at Columbia Bible college last year.

On Sunday the children of Mrs. M. R. Jackson gathered at her home and surprised her with a birthday dinner. Mrs. Jackson received many beautiful and useful gifts. After spending a happy day together, each one went away wishing for her many more happy birthdays in the years to come.

Early Rutherford County Pioneers

Lattimore, R-1, Aug. 11.—In The Courier of July 31, under the caption "Some Revolutionary Heroes of Rutherford County", you mentioned that when Fed Alley was elected sheriff of Rutherford county Major Lewis and others went his bond as sureties. Sheriff Fed Alley failed and his bondsmen had his bond to pay. This broke up Major John Lewis. That was about 1820. My grandfather John Crenshaw Elliott, was also on Sheriff Alley's bond, and it broke him up, too. This connects our Elliott family with the early pioneers.

My great grandfather, Martin Elliott, with a grown up family, came here from Mecklenburg county, Va., in 1806, and settled between First Broad river and Brushy Creek, west of Shelby, along with his son-in-law, George Cabaniss, and son Martin Elliott, Jr. His oldest son, James Elliott, settled on Buffalo Creek, east of Shelby. He had married a Doggett in Virginia and his brother-in-law Coleman Doggett came with him and married a daughter of M. Smith. My grandfather, John Elliott, was settled on Hinton's Creek on 1300 acres of land, 14 miles northwest of Shelby. He married Mary Donahoo of Caswell county, N. C., in 1807. Adam Elliott, youngest son, settled on Brushy Creek. His first wife was a Wilson, his second a Green. They brought 100 negroes with them. My great grandfather's mother was a Thompson. His wife was a Finch; her mother a Crenshaw. The Thompsons, Hords and Jack Calton came with them.

My grandfather built the first grist and saw mill on Hinton's Creek. He died in 1827 and forty negroes were sold at his sale. My grandmother had valuable lands in Rutherford county, Tennessee, that she sold to buy a part of the negroes, which she saved with all the land. The balance went on Fed Alley's bond. The upper Rutherford county Elliotts were here before our family came (See Census Lists, 1790.)

Where did Fed Alley live?

Our old land papers call for Alley lines. I think James Chitwood bought the Alley lands and sold part of it to John Elliott.

In my paramulations in 1868, seeking a better place to live, and on my way to Illinois, I stopped awhile with Abner Alley, near Wartrace, Tenn., 54 miles south of Nashville. He was a man of considerable means, lived in a brick house on a good farm in the Blue Grass region, and worked on his farm. He said his father came from North Carolina, and the way he berated it as a poor state I thought he might have been a son of the absconding sheriff, Fed Alley, and had got to Tennessee with much money. He had been a negro trader, and had lived in Nashville and still had a business there where he spent most of his time.

His son-in-law, Capt. Mackey, a Confederate veteran, managed the farm. Alley said farming was a poor slow way of making money, that he only farmed to support a comfortable home. During the first of the War Between the States, he had fallen out with a neighbor man and they "went gunning for each other" and he had shot down his enemy on the streets of Columbia, Tenn., and fled across the Federal lines north. He returned after the war and stood trial that cost him $15,000, and his victim's widow had secured a large judgment against him and he had transferred his property to his wife. She was a good fine, tall woman who told me of being in the midst of a severe battle. The Confederates had taken a position near her dwelling. The Federals made a sudden assault on the Confederate positions placing her home directly in the Federal battle line and planted their artillery in her yard. The Confederates raked both sides of her house close, filling her yard with dead and wounded. She said she felt pretty safe knowing the Confederates knew she was in the house would not hit it.

But her house was blooded up in a terrible mess with the wounded.

After a while, I think, the Federals withdrew and the Confederates held their position. Mr. Alley tried hard to have me stay with them but I passed on to Illinois, going down the Cumberland river, and 60 miles up the Ohio river to Shawnee-Town where I landed on undisputed free soil. At a Confederate Reunion at Macon, Ga., I learned from an old neighbor that Mr. Alley lived to be quite old. I was in Illinois during the Grant and Seymour campaign 1868.

—JAMES C. ELLIOTT.
