EARLY JOURNALISTIC EFFORTS OF CORN CRACKER

Shelby, R-5, Sept. 29.—The writer has two very logical reasons for neglecting his correspondence to your able and interesting journal. One is physical infirmity of his body, and the other is the dilapidated condition of his typewriter. He is a self-made penman and self-taught manipulator of the typewriter. Ever since his eighteenth year he has written for publications, and his first attempt was regarded as a thunderbolt of humor, because it touched upon the characters in a triple matrimonial elopement from Adair county, Kentucky, to sunny Tennessee. None of the six participants had reached the age of twenty-one, but all felt that from 16 to 18 was quite a reasonable age to still be single. The writer was then aged 17; and felt that one of the brides could have done much better by trusting her future into his keeping, but, alas, for human hopes! The radiant bride-to-be and all her folks entertained a contrary opinion. None of the parties to the transactions were globe-trotters, nor was the writer. But Col. Lucian B. Hunt was esteemed a veritable young Lochinvar and rumor said he had been to Fentress county, Tennessee, the later home of Alvin York, Reports hero of the World War. Reports vary as to how many Germans he killed and captured, but it was somewhere under 5,000. Col. Lucian Hunt had two sons in that war and I had three to call upon as witnesses.

One balmy spring morning I attended Sunday school at Tabor Methodist church and found that Winfield S. Hunt and Corinna Snow, Henry Bascomb Garnett and Fannie Taylor, "Tinker" Tom Taylor and Lizzie Smith, with Col. L. B. Hunt, chief-of-scouts, were happy on the way to the blissful Gretna Green, and making the air vocal with the refrain: "This is the way I long have sought and mourned because I found it not."

It was said that my vernacular had more of the flavor of a bloody pirate, and a stage driver, than of a Sunday school teacher. I remember that I came up two pretty girls met me with a rather tantalizing grin. Later, I used all my native and acquired eloquence to soften their obdurate hearts; but in each case the verdict was "no, Irish need apply." But time heals all wounds. Both those damsels wed somebody else. One is dead and the other is a widow. Col. Lucian B. Hunt survives, and so do four of the eloping squadron. The flight of 56 years causes many changes in the ranks and conditions of men. Col. L. B. Hunt I met two years ago in Kentucky. "Tinker" Tom Taylor and wife I met 19 years ago in Missouri; but failed to meet Winfield S. Hunt and wife, although they are still in Missouri.

While people generally don't care a rap about my state of health, allow me to assure your readers that I am by no means robust. For four weeks I was under treatment of a doctor and the daily ministrations of a trained nurse. Now I hope to be able to attend the celebration at Kings Mountain on October 7, 1930. I had at least four ancestors there on the Patriot side; but nobody more than I admires the gallantry of the heroic Patrick Ferguson.

Son Gives Blood For Mother's Life

An outstanding example of mother love was shown at the Rutherford hospital Wednesday of last week when Marvin Harris, age 17, only son of Mrs. Ollie Harris, of Forest City, gave a quart of his own blood to save his mother's life. Mrs. Harris has been a patient several days at the Rutherford hospital and may have to undergo a serious operation soon, but hospital physicians stated that she must have a transfusion of blood before the operation. Five young stalwart men were called in Tuesday and their blood was tested and it was found that the blood of the son of Mrs. Harris "matched" the best of any. Late reports are that the transfusion was a success and Mrs. Harris is already showing signs of improvement.

SERIES 66 NOW OPEN

Now is the time to apply for shares in this new series. The Building and Loan offers you an ideal way to save.

Right here in our own community is the place where the majority of us will do most of our hard work. Naturally we all want to do everything we can to create and sustain "good times" in this locality.

One of the best ways we know is to keep money in circulation. Some people think that when they invest money with an institution like ours that it is shoveled back in the vault somewhere and kept there until they want it again. But most of you know that is not so.

Your money is invested with us and you receive credit for it. Such funds are lent to build homes under ample security, of course. This is active money and it helps keep "good times." It helps keep workers in all building trades busy. Active dollars mean general prosperity.
