Develop Local Markets For Poultry Products

There is no valid reason why North Carolina markets should buy a large part of their poultry and egg supplies from outside of the State. Present importations are large and therefore the opportunity exists for poultry growers to develop local markets in a profitable way.

"Local growers may capture these markets if they take the same pains as their competitors to produce a quality and do a little judicious advertising," says N. W. Williams, poultryman at State college. "It is most important, however, to produce a quality product. In marketing eggs, careful grading is of utmost importance yet few of our local poultrymen pay any attention to this, therefore, they place on the market, eggs of a wide range in size, shape, shell-color, and shell texture. Then too, these mixed eggs go in any kind of container that may be handy. When these local eggs are placed side by side with those produced by the large out-of-state concerns, the locally grown product looks bad."

It is not alone that the eggs must be packed in attractive containers and be well graded, they must also be consistently good, says the poultryman. They ought never to be over 48 hours old and preferably infertile. One bad egg slipped into a container by accident might ruin the trade of a valued customer. Then, too, fresh eggs are used largely in the diet of babies and invalids. Those purchasing for such purposes rightfully expect consistency in products.

The same fundamental reasoning applies to marketing broilers locally, says Mr. Williams. The grower must study the demands of his market and endeavor to meet them. The season of best prices should also be studied. Milk-fed broilers, finished in good shape, when everyone else is not selling them, will return a good profit to any local poultryman.

Painful Condition

"WHEN I was just a girl at home," writes Mrs. B. F. Riggan, of Baird, Texas, "I took Cardui for cramping and pains in my side and back, and it helped me at that time. "After I was married, I found myself in a weak, run-down condition. I suffered a great deal with my back, which was so weak it hurt me to get up or when I would stand on my feet. I fell off in weight. "A friend of mine, seeing how bad I felt, advised me to take Cardui, which I did. By the time I had taken two bottles, I felt stronger and better than I had in a long time."
